VOL. VII...NO 2040. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, APRIL 3 1858 PRICE TWO CENTS.

ONE DAY LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE HAMMONIA.

The steamship Hammonia arrived at this port on Thursday night bringing London evening papers of the 26th, and London morning papers of the same day. Advices by this steamer are therefore one day later than those received by the Persia.

Consols closed on Saturday at 2 P. M. at 96 ⅞ for money, and 96⅞@97 for the 8th April.

At Paris on Saturday the three per cents. closed at 68f. 85c., an improvement of about ⅛ per cent.

The Bombay mail arrived at London on Saturday March 20. The details of the news, which we publish below, are specially interesting. A letter from Allahabad, dated Feb. 11, says: "The whole force is to be in motion to-morrow. They have been crossing the river at Cawnpore for the last few days, and talk of the attack beginning on the 20th. Sir COLIN CAMPBELL has had an interview here with the Governor-General, concerning Oude affairs. There is a report that a relation of the old King has proclaimed himself King of India, and given orders to the insurgents not to fight us, but to disperse in bands of forty and fifty, and scour the roads and kill the English. I think this is the worst news we have had yet."

The Paris Patrie announces that several small vessels are now arming at different ports, to reinforce the French Admiral in China.

Marshal CANROBERT has taken possession of his command at Nancy.

The Augsburg Gazette says that France and England are agreed upon the following points:

First—The Porte must suppress the insurrection in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Second—It must faithfully execute the Hatti Humayoun.

Should these requisitions be complied with, it will not be necessary to consult the Paris Conference on the subject; otherwise the Conference will be formally called on to settle the question.

The China mail was expected to arrive in London on the 22d.

Letters from La Plata and Rio Janeiro report the yellow fever raging severely among the ships' crews. An English vessel-of-war after suffering dreadfully was evacuated by the 30 men who were spared. Several other ships of all nations were evacuated.

It was mentioned by the Persia that the reports of a convention of Italian delegates given from day to day in the London Times were ascertained to be a hoax. The following, contained in a dispatch to the London Express, (the evening issue of the Daily News,) is probably the ground of that allegation:

"The wags of Turin are laughing at the hoax played on the London papers, which have been publishing proceedings of a fabulous Italian delegate meeting, with speeches from Count BORROMEO, CORRENTI, FARRINI, PALLAVICINNI, DANDOLI and CURIONI in the British metropolis. Now, Count BORROMEO is attending his duties just now in the Piedmontese Senate; FARRINI, CORRENTI and PALLAVICINNI are in their places of Parliament every evening; DANDOLI is at Nice, and CURIONI is at Genoa."

On Friday, March 19, a law was laid before the French Legislative Body, prohibiting the making or selling of percussion caps, in which fulminating mercury is an ingredient, save to certain privileged parties, and a tax of 50 per cent. ad valorem is laid on the article itself, which is valued at an annual produce of 800,000f. to the Exchequer.

The conspirator DE RUDIO, whose life was spared, is said to have informed the French Government of the many refugees in London who are pledged to the assassination of the Emperor.

Marseilles, it is said, will soon have a population of half a million.

The originator and editor of the Biographie Universelle, M. MICHAUD, has just died, aged 80, at Thernes, (not Thermes,) between Paris and Neuilly.

A letter from Marseilles, of the 17th ult., reports that thirty-seven individuals, arrested under the new penal law of general safety, were embarked on the preceding day on the steam-packet Caire, to be transported to Algeria.

A letter from Paris gives the following account of the Emperor:

"Yesterday he was in the Bois de Boulogne without escort, and was walking about with the Empress and the Imperial Prince. I happened this afternoon to be a witness to the almost rash way in which he sets at naught precautions which most men in his situation would be likely to take. Passing through the Tuileries gardens, between 3 and 4 o'clock this afternoon, I saw the Emperor alone, standing on the steps of the little staircase leading from his study to the reserved garden, which is only fenced off from the public promenade by a railing not more than forty yards from the palace, and a railing which anybody might jump over. For at least a quarter of an hour he remained alone, leaning on the bannisters in an attitude of contemplation, with his legs crossed, and smoking a cigar. The day being very fine, thousand of people were walking in the gardens, and great numbers leaned over the railings to stare at him When at length, being summoned by an usher to give audience to some one, he went into his study, he left the outer door open. Whatever may be said against him, truth commands one to say that pusillanimity is not one of his characteristics."

INTERESTING FROM INDIA.

The Expected Battle at Lucknow—Strength of the Sepoy Army—Arrival of the Commander-in-Chief at Lucknow—Nena Sahib in Despair—Strength of the British Army—Crossing the Ganges—The Trial of the King of Delhi, &c.

Bombay (Feb. 24) Correspondence of the London Times.

In all probability the great blow has been already delivered at Lucknow by the Commander-in-Chief. Not, as we anticipated, from the direction of Futtyghur and the Ramgunga, but along the direct road from Cawnpore, by which, on the track of HAVELOCK and OUTRAM, he has once already marched to victory, Sir COLIN advances upon the rebellious city. The enemy before him is perhaps 100,000 strong, men for the most part trained to arms by English discipline, or inured to their use during the stormy years of the dethroned dynasty.

The city which they hold is said to have been greatly strengthened by them since the masterly movement of the Commander-in-Chief withdrew from their tiger-clutch the long-imprisoned English garrison. We read of works being thrown up, not of earth only, but of solid masonry. But whether the rebels will attempt to hold them against the tremendous fire of the English artillery is at least doubtful. Many men in Sir COLIN's force were disposed to think that no serious resistance would be offered It can hardly be, however, but that by the next mail that leaves Calcutta you will receive, from the practiced and well-known hand of an eye-witness, a recital of events not less affecting the honor of England than the charge at Balaklava or the stand upon the heights of Inkermann.

On the first of this month, the Commander-in-Chief broke up his camp at Futtyghur, and marched to Cawnpore. He himself, with General MANSFIELD and other officers, pushed on in advance of the army, escorted by the 9th lancers and a troop of Bengal horse artillery, and, covering from 20 to 25 miles a day, arrived at Cawnpore on the 4th. A private letter from an officer on the staff, describes Sir COLIN as in excellent health and spirits.

When at their last halting place before entering Cawnpore—at or near Shoorajpoore—the party had intelligence of our detested enemy, NENA SAHIB. According to the natives, he was on the opposite side of the river in Oude, in the last extremity of terror and despair. Deserted by, or having himself dismissed, all his followers but a few Mahratta irregular infantry, he wanders about the country with such precipitation and impatience of delay that, in the expressive native phrase, "He dines in one place and washes his hands in another." By thus constantly shifting his position, and by equally constant changes in his dress and accoutrements, he seeks to lessen or to counteract the increasing chances of capture by an enemy against whom he knows that he has sinned too deeply to be forgiven.

Sir COLIN having, as I have said, pushed on from Futtyghur for Cawnpore, the troops followed him with all possible speed. The 82d, with Sikh horse and foot, remained at Futtyghur, WALPOLE's brigade was withdrawn across the Ganges from the right bank of the Ramgunga, on the further bank of which river he had been watching a large but inactive body of Rohilcund rebels and the bridge removed to Futtyghur. HOPE's brigade, which on the 26th of January overthrew with loss a body of Mussulman fanatics at Shumsabad, Mhow, twenty-five miles from Futtyghur, marching on the 1st, reached Cawnpore on the 7th. WALPOLE's, after bringing up the bridge from the Ramgunga, marched on the 4th, and arrived on the 10th and 11th. Its strength was the 2d and 3d battalions rifle brigade, the 23d fusiliers, 2d Punjab infantry, Hodson's horse, four of Captain PEEL's guns, two troops, and two field batteries of artillery. Sir COLIN went down on the 8th to see and confer with the Governor-General at Allahabad, but before that date two bridges had been thrown across the river, and the movement into Oude had commenced. A brigade under Col. CAMPBELL, of the Bays, crossed on the 4th, (as I wrote in my last,) composed of the 7th huzzars, 79th Highlanders, and Major ANDERSON's troop of horse-artillery.

On the 6th went over to the 9th Lancers, 1st Bengal Fusiliers, and REMINGTON's troop of Bengal Horse Artillery. On the 10th, the 42d and 93d Highlanders, Hodson's Horse, and another troop of Horse Artillery. On the 12th, the date of our latest accounts, Sir COLIN had returned from Allahabad, but had not yet crossed into Oude. The report that has reached us attributes this delay to the non-arrival of the siege-train and convoy from Agra, and adds that considerable anxiety was felt for the safety of this important addition to the attacking force. But this, I think, is a mistake, for the convoy appears to have been but two marches from Cawnpore on the 4th, with the siege train only one march in its rear. And an officer writing from the Chief's camp on the 8th, states expressly that the train came in on the 7th, and was to cross about the 12th.

I conclude, therefore, that Sir COLIN was only waiting to see the whole force over before he himself crossed, and that within a day or two after the date of our latest accounts he once more set foot in the rebel province, at the head of probably from 12,000 to 15,000 men, and about 140 guns, some 80 of them pieces of heavy metal, and the remaining 60 field-pieces, the whole number under the command of Sir ARCHDALE WILSON. The road to Alumbagh he would find quite clear, strong boules of troops being stationed at Oonao, Busserutgunge and the Bunnee bridge. From Alumbagh itself our latest news is of the 12th inst., when all was well. No attack had been made by the enemy since their bloody repulse of the 16th of January; but one was expected on that very day, and the writer of the letter to which I am referring—an officer of the 78th—says, "We are all in harness."

Meanwhile, JUNG BAHADOOR, with his Ghoorkas, was lying before Fyzabad, in Eastern Oude, but, for want of ammunition, was unable to take the place. Supplies were consequently ordered for him from Benares, and pending their arrival at his camp, the march of Brigadier FRANKS on the road from Jaunpore by Sultanpore to Lucknow was halted at Budlapore. These were the respective positions—when last we heard of them, about the 7th of this month—of the two auxiliary forces destined to aid the Commander-in-Chief in the reconquest of Oude.

I must not omit to mention that the great Oude feudatory, MAUN SINGH, has preserved and sent from Lucknow some forty or fifty English or Anglo-Indian men, women and children, of whom some have already reached Goruckpore.

Turning to the northwest of Oude, where the great province of Rohilcund yet remains to be tranquilized, we find that five Sikh regiments of foot, with horse and artillery, are moving down the roads from Lahore; and already within the boundaries of the province, and without the aid of the Sikh force, a considerable blow has been inflicted upon the rebels of Bareilly. Three large bodies of these men were at the beginning of this month stationed at three several points between Bareilly and the hills. One party, under FUZL HUQ, held the road to Pecleebheet, at a point fourteen miles from the bottom of the Nynee Tal hill. A second was at Rudapore, further to the west; and a third was in the centre on the main Bareilly Road, 24 miles from the Nynee Tal hill, or rather, from the camp at the bottom of the hill, where lay Colonel M'CAUSLAND with the 66th Ghoorkas, some 500 Nepaulese and hillmen, and some irregular horse and four light field pieces—in all about 1,200 men.

With this little force M'CAUSLAND on the 10th attacked the rebels on the Bareilly road, who were commanded by one KALEE KHAN, and had approached him within 13 miles, and utterly routed them, capturing three guns and killing and wounding 500 of the enemy. His own loss in killed and wounded was 35, among the latter there being two officers of the 66th, GAPP and TYRRAS. The action over, the Colonel prudently marched back to his camp, lest he should be attacked in flank by the other rebel forces, having within 24 hours, marched nearly 30 miles, and fought a pitched battle.

From Delhi, the principal news is that of the trial of the ex King, which comes down to the evidence taken on the 12th day. Little had been educed directly to implicate the prisoner in the murder of the victims in the first outbreak on the 11th of May, or of the more general slaughter five days later. But ample details of the massacre—which, be it remembered, took place in the Palace—were given, and, while there was an evident shrinking on the part of the witnesses from asserting that they were directed by the prisoner, there was not a particle of evidence to show that he was dissuading, or even passive in the matter.

All is quiet in the Punjab, with Sikh regiments marching down into Hindostan, and English ones coming up from Kurrachee to take their place. Sir JOHN LAWRENCE arrived with the 17th Punjab Infantry at Loodhiana on the 4th, on his way to Delhi and Agra, the districts lately handed over to his management. From Mooltan the 7th Fusileers had arrived at Lahore, setting free the 81st, who go up to reinforce the somewhat crippled garrison of Peshawur.

From Malwa we learn that the contingent of that province, of which the greater part has mutinied, is to be formally disbanded. At Indore the Rajah of Amjhera, one of the very first to commence disturbances in those parts, was hanged on the 10th. He was spared by Sir ROBERT HAMILTON when his Ministers were executed, on the score, as I understood at the time, of imbecility.

Further to the eastward in Central India, Sir HUGH ROSE and General WHITLOCK are pressing on, helping to confine into an ever narrowing circle the yet blazing or smouldering fire of rebellion. Sir HUGH, after relieving Saugor, before proceeding upward, moved to the eastward against a strongly situated fort called Gurrakota, some 25 miles off, supposed to be occupied by the remains of the mutinied 52d Bengal native infantry. He was proceeding to invest the place when it was abandoned by its occupants.

WHITLOCK's force was expected to leave Jubbulpore on or about the 15th, and would advance in two divisions, one along the great road to the Ganges, the other to Saugor, by way of Dumoh.

The Calpee rebels, thus urged upon in the rear, have twice come to blows with our troops—once toward Etawah, where 125 of them fell in a walled inclosure before Mr. HUME, the Collector, and some irregulars; the second time toward Cawnpore, where some of the 88th attacked a party that had crossed the Jumna and slew 80 of them.

In this Presidency nothing has occurred of much importance.

TRIAL OF THE KING OF DELHI.

From the Delhi Gazette.

The trial of the Ex-King of Delhi commenced on Wednesday, Jan. 27, in the Dewan Khas of the Palace. It was 12½ before the prisoner was brought in He appeared very infirm and tottered into Court supported on one side by the "interesting youth," JUMMA BUKHT, and on the other by a confidential servant, and coiled himself into a small bundle upon the cushion assigned to him. He presented such a picture of helpless imbecility as under other circumstances must have awakened pity. He sat coiled up on a cushion on the left of the President, and to the right of the Government prosecutor; his son JUMMA BUKHT, standing a few yards to his left, and a guard of rifles beyond all.

The prosecutor read the charges against the prisoner, stating that although the prisoner might be fully convicted by the Court, no capital sentence could be passed upon him, in consequence of his life having been guaranteed to him by Gen. WILLIAMS, in a promise conveyed through Capt. HODSON.

The prosecutor then put the question though the interpreter, "guilty or not guilty," which the prisoner either did not, or affected not to understand; and there was some delay in explaining it to him. He then declared himself profoundly ignorant of the nature of the charges against him, although a translated copy of them was furnished and read to him in the presence of witnesses, some twenty days previous. After some more delay the prisoner pleaded "Not guilty," and the business of the Court proceeded.

On the second day the sitting was closed, in consequence of the indisposition of the prisoner.

On the third day, while the evidence was being taken, the prisoner, coiled up easily upon his cushion, appeared lost in the land of dreams; and, except when anything particular struck him, continued unmindful of what was passing around him.

On the fourth and fifth days he was aroused from sleep to hear the evidence read. A professional artist was in attendance on the latter day, making a sketch of the prisoner, as he lay on his couch.

On the sixth day, the translation of a letter, dated the 24th of March, addressed to the late Mr. COLVIL, Lieutenant-Governor N. W. P., was read, disclosing the fact that as far back as a year and a half ago secret emissaries were sent by the King of Delhi, to Persia, through the agency of one MAHOMED HUSSUN USKHEREE, the object of which was evidently to obtain assistance to complete the overthrow of British power in India. The perusal of the letter, which bears both the Delhi and Agra postmark, excited considerable sensation in court.

On the seventh and eighth days the prosecutor examined, through the interpreter, a person named JUTMULL, formerly news-writer to the Lieutenant-Governor at Agra. His evidence confirmed all we have already heard concerning the cold-blooded atrocities committed absolutely under the prisoner's own apartments in the palace. The canal water, which ran through the place of execution, was, it appears, used for the purpose of washing away all traces of the bloody deed.

Captain FORREST, Commissary of Ordnance, was examined on the 8th and 9th days, and on the 10th Sir THEOPHILUS METCALFE, C. S., gave evidence. The "soothsayer," HUSSUN USKHEREE, was examined, and denied all that had been said of his wonderful powers.

The prisoner was then referred to, and notwithstanding his recorded statement of his firm belief in the powers attributed to the witness, he denied all knowledge of him or his powers. He was reminded of his statement made but a few days previous, but all to no purpose; he completely ignored him; and HUSSUN USKHEREE was returned to his place of confinement, much to the disgust of those who expected some interesting revelations from him.

The next witness called was BUKHTAWUR, a peon in the service of the late Captain DOUGLAS. His evidence chiefly related to the occurrences of the 11th of May.

The Court was occupied the whole of the eleventh day with the examination of a person named CHUNEE, formerly editor of a native paper entitled the Delhi News, conducted on a novel principle, the tedior's duty being to write his paper full, and then carry it around and read it to his subscribers' The witness stated, in reply to questions, that the Mahometans of the city were in the habit of boasting that the Persians, aided by the Russians, were coming to drive the English out of the country, and gave it as his firm belief that the Mahometans were very much excited about the Persian war. The Chuppatties which were circulated were, he said, for the purpose of bringing together a large body of men for some business to be explained to them hereafter, and he said they originated at or near Kernaul. CHUNEE concluded his evidence of this day by replying to a question put by the prosecutor, as to who gave the order to massacre the Europeans, "The King himself; who else could give the order?"

On the twelfth day "Golam" was examined, and gave some particulars of the massacre of Europeans inside the Palace, of which he was an eye-witness.

The prisoner's HAKEEM, ESSAN-OOLLA KHAN, was then called in and examined on oath. His evidence, which ought to be and might be, but for evident "bias" interesting and important, always broke down when coming to a certain point, viz.: criminating the prisoner.

The prisoner was more lively than usual to-day; declared his innocence of everything several times, and amused himself by twisting and untwisting a scarf around his head, and asking for a stimulant occasionally.

[We have already published the telegram, as received in Bombay, announcing the conviction of the King of Delhi and his sentence, by the Court, of transportation for life to the Andamans.

The Montgomery Substitute Rejected by the Senate—Expected Defeat of the Deficiency Bill—The Volunteer Bill—Willett's Point—Allsop in Washington—Camels for the Army—Naval Appointments, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, April 2.

The Deficiency bill will be voted upon to-morrow, and it is in great danger of rejection. It contains about ten millions of dollars, viz.:

For the Army	$8,000,000
For the Post-Office service	1,400,000
Miscellaneous	250,000

Amendments calling for $2,500,000 will be presented.

In the Senate vote on the Montgomery amendment, PUGH changed to Lecompton, and SUMNER was absent. One hundred and eighteen members of the House stand pledged to vote to adhere, which cuts off the Conference Committee, and forces the Senate to recede or lose the bill.

It is reported that Capt. RYNDERS has rented to Government Burton's old Theatre for $16,000 a year, with an obligation to sell at the end of a year for $32,000. A.

[FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.]

The House Military Committee have agreed to the Senate's amendments to the Volunteer bill, and it will accordingly pass.

The Willett's Point Investigation Committee intend to summon RICHARD SCHELL to give his evidence with reference to that speculation, but not probably until after the adjournment of the New-York Legislature. The prominent parties in your City are also to be called on.

It is rumored that ALLSOP, the English fugitive, has arrived here, with the purpose of ascertainigg what the views of Government are on his extradition, if demanded.

There was a long Cabinet consultation to-day, and it is believed that the Kansas question formed the subject of deliberation.

Lieut. BEALE, of the Camel Wagon-road Expedition, arrived here to-day, and reported himself at the War Department. The success of the Camel experiment has inclined the Administration to further use of them, and Congress will be asked to make an application of $25,000 to purchase additional supplies. Partial arrangements are already made, and a contract agreed on by the Secretary of War. It is also determined to appoint a Commissioner to go to Africa and make a treaty by which permanent supplies can be procured from that country instead of Arabia. O.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Friday, April 2.

Letters received this morning, at the War Department, from Lieut. IVES, commanding the Colorado River expedition, dated Feb. 11, says that the steamer Explorer had reached the Mojaro villages, and that the navigation of the river continued difficult. The Indians had stated that they had never known the water to be so low. All the exploring party were well, and no accident whatever had occurred.

The receipts at the Treasury last week were nearly a million of dollars. The amount subject to draft is over six millions and a half. Drafts were issued amounting to a million and a quarter.

The Government has made a contract, with a citizen of Texas, for supplying 25,000 worth of camels for the use of the army. A commercial arrangement will be made at some point in Africa affording the best facilities for purchasing animals suitable to our climate, and for exportation hither.

Lieutenant BEALE has submitted to the War Department a report concerning the road surveyed and opened by him last Summer from Fort Defiance to the Colorado River. It confirms previous statements. He passed over the road in mid-winter, meeting with snow only once, and then not enough to cover the ground. The climate was such that there was no occasion to use tents.

The bill to supply the deficiency for the fiscal year ending a year from June next, is under consideration in the House. It appropriates nine and a half millions of dollars, of which nearly eight millions is for the army, and a million four hundred and sixty-nine thousand to supply the deficiency in the revenue of the Post-Office Department.

The House Committee on Public Lands will report but few bills giving lands for railroads, and none to the States which have already received grants for such purposes.

The Senate confirmed the following appointments as Lieutenants of the Navy: John G. Walker, John G. Mitchell, Francis M. Ramsay, Richard M. Mead, Jr., Marshall C. Campbell, Robert Boyd, Jr., Calvin F. Thomas, Charles C. Carpenter, Andrew J. McCartney.

Senator SUMNER was telegraphed to yesterday to come on here, but did not arrive here until after the Senate to-day acted on the House amendment to the Kansas bill.

XXXVth CONGRESS.....First Session.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Friday, April 2.

The business transacted during the morning hour was of an unimportant description.

The Kansas bill from the House was taken up.

The amendments were read, whereupon

Mr. GREEN submitted a motion, without comment, to disagree to the House's amendment to the Kansas bill.

Mr. BIGLER considered the amendment as a clear violation of the Democratic principle that Congress would not interfere with the right of the people of Territories to govern themselves. Under that principle he had hoped to see the fraternal sight of two States—one Slave and the other Free—coming into the Union together. He was against the amendment because it sets aside what the people of Kansas have already done. The amendment provides that if the present Constitution be voted down, the people of Kansas can call a Convention to frame a new one, on which the President may admit her by proclamation. She thus becomes a State without coming before Congress at all. What guarantee against abuse is there in this? Who knows if the Constitution that may be framed will be Republican in form, or may not contain inadmissible features? There were many insidious features about this measure of the House which pleased the public eye, but he trusted that we were near the close of the Kansas turmoil. The agitation of Slavery was spreading like a upas, poisoning the channels of intercourse between the great parties of the Union. He had hoped that the Slavery field would have been set at rest by Kansas coming into the Union under the Senate bill.

Mr. DOUGLAS had hoped, with the Senator from Pennsylvania, that the question would have been settled in accordance with those Democratic principles which had been the rule of his (DOUGLAS') life. He thought if the amendments were concurred in by the Senate, it would be the triumph of those principles, and bring peace and quiet. The Senators on the other side urge, as a reason for the admission of Kansas, that it will bring peace. Why not, then, admit her? We can do it in one hour, by assenting to this amendment. Concur with the House, and the action is final, and Kansas is in the Union, with a right to make a Constitution to suit herself. Let men of all parties and sections then unite in settling the Contention. After replying to Mr. BIGLER's opinion that it was a violation of Democratic principles, Mr. DOUGLAS referred to the President's Message alluding to Kansas and Nebraska, and asked if the President had abandoned the Democratic Party. The object of the reference of the Constitution to the people, is simply to ascertain if it is an embodiment of their will, if it is their act and deed, and it is the duty of Congress to see that it is the embodiment of their will, before making it their fundamental law. The Senator from Pennsylvania had cited the case of Florida. Florida was no precedent, and proves nothing except to engraft on the action of Government the principle that there is no need of a Constitution to be the will of the people. Such reasoning strikes at the root of all free Governments—strikes the props from all parties, Democratic, American and Republican. The House had amended the bill, which accomplishes two great points—one, that it settles this Kansas excitement—another, that it recognizes the right of the people of Kansas to frame their own institutions. Why then, not all unite and vote for the amended bill, and thus settle the Kansas question? Vote for it, and the right of the people is recognized. Vote for it, and States' rights and sovereignty are preserved. Vote for it, and there is peace in the country.

Mr. PUGH explained the reasons which would influence him to vote against the House amendment. His instructions from Ohio did not cover the present juncture, hence he would exercise the right of private judgment. He then addressed himself to various legal points, showing the inapplicability of the provisions in the amendment to the circumstances of the case. The amendment submitted the Constitution to a more contracted circle of voters than have already voted on the Slavery clause. It is, however, futile to submit it to vote. The Free-State men having a majority, cannot approve the Slavery clause—hence they would vote the Constitution down and protract the excitement of framing a new one. They must inevitably vote it down—they could do nothing else. If the ten commandments were appended to the Constitution they must inevitably vote it down. He concluded by showing that if Congress assented to the amended Kansas bill they would discharge themselves from all power over the Constitution that might be framed. The passage of the bill would precipitate the people of Kansas into a new condition of anarchy. He was opposed to it in every shape and form. He considered it the most objectionable proposition yet submitted.

No other Senator offering remarks, Mr. GREEN's motion was adopted by yeas 32, nays 23.

NAYS—Messrs Broderick, Cameron, Chandler, Clark, Collamer, Crittenden, Dixon, Doolittle, Douglas, Fessenden, Foote, Foster, Hale, Hamlin, Harlan, King, Seward, Simmons, Stuart, Trumbull, Wade, Wilson.

ABSENT—Messrs. Bates, Davis, Durkee, Henderson, Reid, Sumner, Toombs.

The Senate was crowded, but not much excitement manifested. After several calls for the Yeas and Nays, made to prevent Mr. DOUGLAS from taking up the Minnesota bill, the Senate adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, April 2.

The House went into Committee on the Deficiency Appropriation bill.

Mr. JONES, (Tenn.,) while opposing various items in the bill, particularly for the Army, said incidenally that there was no evidence of a rebellion in Utah He would send civil officers thither, and if the Mormons did not cooperate in the Administration of the Government, he would repeal the organic law and give BRIGHAM YOUNG and Company fair notice to quit our soil.

Mr. LOVEJOY, of Illinois, said it would be better to give out the Mormon war by contract, and he would not be surprised if this, by the future historian, should be called the war of plunderers and contractors. He would not vote to put money into the pockets of those harpies and jobbers who get fat jobs on account of their political opinions. He also spoke of extravagant contracts having been made by the Government.

Mr. FAULKNER, of Virginia, in reply, said there was a proposition to furnish corn at 98 cents per bushel, but it was rejected, and directions were issued to purchase at the lowest prices.

The question of procuring Quarter-Masters' supplies was generally discussed.

Mr. PHELPS, of Missouri, defended the expedition to Utah, which was, he said, dispatched with no expectation of making war on the Mormons. Patriotism demanded that supplies should be voted for the maintenance of the army. He also defended the estimates of the War Department.

The House then adjourned till Monday.

The Virginia Legislature.

RICHMOND, Va., Friday, April 2.

The bill fixing the first of May for the resumption of specie payments, has passed both Houses.

The bill requiring parent banks to redeem the notes of their branches in specie, and requiring independent banks to establish an agency at Richmond or Baltimore for the redemption of their notes, has also finally passed, and takes effect in April, 1859.

The Senate has adopted a joint resolution, appropriating $2,000 to remove the remains of President MONROE from New-York to Richmond.

The brig Lion, of Boston, for AUX CAYES, was lost on Inagua Island, (one of he group of the Bahamas,) with all hands, except one seaman that was saved.

Burning of the Steamer Sultan—Fifteen to Twenty Lives Lost.

ST. LOUIS, Friday, April 2.

Information has been received here that the steamer Sultan was burned to the water's edge, and sunk near Cape Girardeau, Mo., 150 miles below this city, at 3 o'clock this morning, and that fifteen or twenty lives were lost. Among the lost were D. D. MOORE, clerk of the boat; HENRY ELI, pilot; JOSEPH BLACKBURNE, watchman; the whole of the cabin crew and the barkeeper, (name unknown.) Two lady and two gentlemen passengers are missing, and are supposed to be lost. Neither their names nor the full particulars of the catastrophe have yet reached this city. The Sultan was bound to New-Orleans with a full cargo of Western produce, which, with the boat, is a total loss.

LATER.—The Sultan was burned near St. Genevieve, not Cape Girardeau. The boat was valued at $25,000, and is insured $17,000. Her cargo consisted of 1,000 tons of flour, pork, lead and wheat. There was no insurance on the frieght list. The accounts of the disaster are so conflicting that it is impossible to ascertain correctly at present who or how many have been lost.

Casualty at Sea.

BOSTON, Friday, April 2.

A letter from Captain DALE, of the ship Fleetwood, states that while on the passage from Palladelphia for Cape Town, C. G. H., during a gale, HIRAM CARPENTER, of New-Hampshire, and EDWIN HUBBARD, of Middletown, Conn., the former carpenter of the ship, and the latter a seaman, fell from aloft and were drowned.

FROM ALBANY.

Hurrying up Business—The Budget of the Chancellor of the Exchequer—Economy in the House—Mr. Chatfield Again Boisterous—Notaries Confirmed, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Friday, April 2, 1858.

Both Houses were engaged to-day in the third reading of bills. None of the bills passed were of any general interest.

The business of the State is being done up in short order, and in much the way that it has been in times past. Everything is going on the lightning train—but not all in one direction. Some goes through—some goes to the table, and some goes to the—well where the bad folks go.

I do not think so much legislation is to be done this year as last—but I do think the business is to be quite as badly done as it has ever been before.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, this morning, presented his budget. It is quite full, and will be found to contain a trifle more than the accustomed douceurs. Where the money is to come from the Chancellor does not say. I used to think the Treasury of the State had no bottom, or rather that the bottom had never been found. But I was mistaken. I had not made due allowance for persevering efforts. I had not accurately calculated the effect of protracted efforts to reach the bottom of the till—for it is certain the bottom has been reached. There is not now in the strong box, so much bread and cheese as would tempt a church mouse to leave the purlieus of the chancel.

But, notwithstanding, the bottom has been reached, it appears there are still left those who are willing to make a voyage of exploration—to dive down to the very bottom, in the hope that some treasures may yet be hidden in the mystic depths. I give you a synopsis of the Chancellor's bill, or rather a recital of those items which might have been omitted, if the temper of the Ways and Means had been such as to turn a deaf ear to the meeting importunities of the "lame, the halt and the blind."

The House, in a fit of economy, to-day passed a resolution, directing the Postmaster of the Assembly not to transmit to the Post-Office any document the postage on which was more than fifteen cents. And yet, I believe, the same House has been rampant for innumerable copies of one document, the postage of which amounts to about three times that sum. Of course the resolution of to-day was merely Pickwickian. To-morrow, or the day after, it will be quietly reconsidered, and the documents will go off as before.

Mr. CHATFIELD appears to be destined to make some kind of a reputation in connection with this Assembly. Some time ago he had a fight with Mr. J. O. DELANEY, in which he showed great tenacity of grief. A few days after he became so disorderly that the House directed the Sergeant-at-Arms to take him in custody. Then he was released, through the kindly interference of Mr. LAW. To-day he was boisterous again, and to-day the House again ordered the Sergeant-at-Arms to take him from the floor. It is unfortunate that at this period of the session a constituency should be deprived of its representation on the floor; but it seems a matter of necessity that such should be the case.

ALL FOOLS' DAY.

The roguish were very busy yesterday, in playing the jokes usual on the 1st of April; and many were very well played, and were quite successful.

Some person procured from the Governor's room the kind of paper on which his Excellency usually writes his letters. These were filled up generally with requests from the Governor that those to whom they were addressed would at once call at the Executive Chamber. I saw more than one of the Senate legislators fold up his specs, gather his papers, lock his drawers, and then go gravely down to the conference which his Excellency had invited. One of the most formal and reserved of all the Senate was first "sold." "I swear," is a common expression, and one that is not usually very forcible; but I thought it had an immense force, as the Senator gave it, on emerging from the Executive's room.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

There was another batch of Notaries confirmed today in executive session, but there was no other business done.

Major General AARON WARD, of Westchester, having resigned his commission, the Governor to-day transmitted to the Senate the name of Brigadier-General DURYEA for confirmation as Major-General. General DURYEA is well known to the military gentlemen of the State, and his appointment will give them universal satisfaction. He has a bearing worthy of a soldier—has the attributes that fit him to command, and the courteous and gentlemanly demeanor that will make obeyance a pleasure.

REDUCTION OF CANAL TOLLS.

The Canal Board has passed a resolution reducing the rate of tolls on the canals, on merchandise, fifty per cent., or from four to two mills per 1,000 pounds per mile. On flour the reduction is from three mills to two mills per 1,000 pounds per mile, or thirty-three per cent.

This is a heavy reduction, and it must make a material increase in the tonnage of the canals. LEO.

To incorporate the Kellerman Hygienic and Healing Institute in the City of New York.

EVENING SESSION.

The Canal Department submitted a list of articles on which they recommend a reduction of canal tolls of about forty per cent on the rates of 1852. Among the articles mentioned are flour, beef, bacon, cheese, lard, lard-oil, butter, tallow, wool, whisky, pot and pearl ashes

FRIDAY, April 2—P. M.

The day has been a quiet one in Money affairs. The ease and cheapness of Money offered on temporary employment are rather on the increase, and we hear of some loans left at call, below 5 ₱ cent., though 5@6 ₱ cent. are the general terms. The Foreign Bill drawers, under the ease in Money, are getting a further advance on Sterling, and the business for the Fulton done today was at 108¼@108¾ ₱ cent.; some leading parties holding for 109 ₱ cent. at the close. Francs are 5.18¾@5.16¼.

The Hamburg steamer, which touched at Southampton, Sunday, March 21, brings a day's later news from London than by the Persia. The English Funds were firm at 96¾@97, and a slight advance is noted on the French Bourse. The Gold in the Bank of England had increased about $1,400,000 after the making up of the weekly report of Wednesday, March 17.

At the Stock Exchange, this forenoon, a dull feeling obtained, and only a very moderate business was accomplished, and between the speculative sellers for a decline, and buyers for the rise, inside the Board of Brokers, the result of the session appears to have been a drawn game. In the afternoon, however, at the Second Board, the Bears entered the market as sellers with considerable vigor, and not being met in a corresponding te nper by the other party, they established a decline of ¾@ 1¼ ₱ cent. on the leading speculatives, as compared with the closing prices of yesterday after noon. The price made for New-York Central was 85@85¾ ₱ cent.; Erie, 21¾; Reading, 46¾; Hudson, 29@28¾; Michigan Southern, 21¾@ 21¾; Galena, 89, and Rock Island 72 ₱ cent. Panama left off firm, and Illinois Central advanced 2¼ ₱ cent. on the short sales of day before yesterday, 96 ₱ cent. being paid for the cash stock. In regard to New-York Central and Erie, we repeat the intimation of yesterday, that the steamboat party are Bears in both stocks, and it is more than insinuated that the People's Line influence bear no particular good will to the Central Company, because the latter direct their freight up and down the river to no particular boats. The Philadelphians continue moderate sellers of Reading, though the leading short interest in the stock is here. The shortsellers of Rock Island obtained a decided advantage to-day, and the stock appears to have less support in the Board than for some weeks past. The April dividend will, no doubt, be formally passed, but parties bearing the stock claim that they have other reasons to look to a decline in the decrease of the Spring receipts, and the fact that the Chicago and Mississippi Company have built a third track into Chicago for their own use, in place of leaving, as heretofore, 40 miles of the Rock Island from Joliet. On the other hand, the management of the Company report that they are operating their line with more economy, and making more money in proportion to the gross traffic than last season. The Michigan Southern common and preferred shares left off dull and lower. The transfers are to be closed for nearly a month to await the election of Directors on the 28th inst. Meanwhile, considerable speculations are not unlikely, on contracts for the reopening. The business in Hudson River shares was light today. The Bulls obtained an advantage early in the week of 3@4 ₱ cent., in settling up the short contracts which they took from the other party a few days before at 27@28 ₱ cent. A large business was done to-day in Missouri State Sixes, at steady rates. The general market left off quite heavy.

The foregoing is our own compilation of the general state of the Company on 1st January, as derived from the proceedings at the annual meeting of the stockholders at Chicago, on 16th ult.

The transfers of the Michigan Southern Co. close to-morrow, preparatory to the annual election of Directors at Toledo on the 28th inst. The circular of the minority of three of the present board soliciting proxies to contest the new election, has given rise to a controversy, involving the responsibility for the past management of the Company, which excites unusual interest among the stockholders. The President of the Company, Mr. JERVIS, one of the minority referred to, having, in a card to the Evening Post, sought to divert the issue with the majority of his colleagues by a reference to the LITCHFIELD influence, Mr. EDWIN C. LITCHFIELD addresses a communication in reply to this point in the controversy, which we insert in another place; simply remarking that the opportunity is embraced by this gentleman to set right, in pretty direct terms, a number of errors puolicly current last Fall in regard to the real source of trouble and just responsibility for a failure in the old direction of the Company.

The balance in the various depositories of the United States Treasury, at the close of March, subject to the draft of the Department, (exclusive of Funds to the credit of minor disbursing officers,) amounted to $6,881,101.

The new house of EDWARD W. CLARK & Co., bankers, Philadelphia,—in announcing that all claims against the late firm of E. W. CLARK & Co. have been paid in full,—add that henceforward they shall use the old name in all business transactions.

The Michigan Southern Controversy.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The majority of the Directors of the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad Company have authorized a circular to be sent to their stockholders, requesting those who cannot attend the ensuing election to send their proxies to the office of the Company, "either with or without the name of the person" whom they may desire to have represent them, and stating that if proxies are returned in blank, "the Board of Directors will designate some one to vote upon them."

The minority, consisting of Messrs. Jervis, Olyphant & Riggs have issued a counter-circular, requesting the stockholders to constitute them their proxies. In that Circular they use the following language:

"The undersigned have reason to believe that a movement is already instituted for the purpose of bringing your Company once more under the influence of that control which has heretofore proved so prejudicial to your interests, and which, if successful, can only result, as they believe, in disaster."

These conflicting circulars gave rise to a correspondence between sundry stockholders and the Treasurer of the Company, from which it appears that the names of the Directors, and their respective interest in the stock of the Company on the 18th March, when the order was made by the Board for the issue of the regular circular, were as follows.

I do not stop now to inquire how the gentlemen not holding stock, can act as directors in a Company whose charter and laws provide that "no person shall be a Director unless he shall be a stockholder, owning stock absolutely, and in his own name and right." While it is evident that Messrs. Olyphant and Riggs are not now legal Directors of the Company, I entertain no doubt that, in sitting and voting as such heretofore, they have acted under a misapprehension, for which I shall not censure them.

Mr. Olyphant and Mr. Jervis have both responded to Mr. Treasurer Walcott, in letters which have been published.

Mr. Olyphant assumes that "the parties who controlled the Company for so long a time," and who, he naively adds, "have unquestioned ability and great experience," "desire to exercise their influence once more." He fears that "stockholders, if not warned, may ignorantly give them the desired power;" and, while not controverting the Treasurer's statement, showing that he had no stock standing in his name, he adds that he "shall not increase his interest in it' until he knows how the election is going! Mr. Jervis goes out of his way to drag my name into this controversy, and volunteers an undignified personal attack upon myself and friends, as follows:

"I have been thus particular, that the stockholders may see how much of truth there is in the attacks made on the circular of myself and others. We issued the circular because we believed there was a movement to reinstate the former control, which has been confirmed by the subsequent activity of the Litchfields, and their personal friends, in soliciting proxies and publishing letters in the papers, and we regarded it a duty we owed to the stockholders to put them on their guard. The question is now before them; they have the opportunity of choosing. It is now clear who are the parties in this contest. If they prefer the Litchfield influence to mine, they certainly have a right to do so, and I have no right to complain. But I have the right to keep myself out of a board not constituted to act harmoniously for the efficient and faithful promotion of the interest of the Company."

It is thus seen that the sole reason assigned by these gentlemen, who represent little or no interest in the Company, for their singular course in canvassing for proxies in opposition to the action of the Board, is their fear that the parties spoken of by Mr. Jervis as "the Litchfield influence," are making an effort to reinstate the former control."

Were this true, and were it a subject for so much alarm as they manifest, it is not perceived why they should be entrusted with the power to protect the Company in this emergency. Could not the large stockholders, composing the majority of the Directors, do it as well? Amongst the 1,500 shareholders of the Company, are there net three honest men to be found who can hold the proxies, without troubling these gentlemen, who have no pecuniary interest at stake?

They pretend to fear that "the Litchfields and their personal friends" are, like themselves, soliciting proxies to promote their own election; and to regard it as a duty to the stockholders to put them on their guard." I consider this a mere pretence—an electioneering trick—put forth in the hope of working upon some old prejudice, or exciting some new one, whereby stockholders might be induced to trust them with their proxies, and withhold them from the majority of the Board.

To prevent misconception, I beg to say most unqualifiedly, that I neither seek nor desire an election to a Directorship nor to any other office in the Company: nor am I aware that any of my family or personal friends are candidates for any such distinction.

If, therefore, their fear that such might be the case was the real reason for issuing the minority circular, Mr. Jervis and his friends may now safely desist from their opposition to the authorized action of the Board.

Here I should terminate if the minority had confined themselves to canvassing for proxies, and had not gone out of the way to assault parties whom they had no right to drag into this controversy. Messrs. Olyphant and Riggs, with no personal acquaintance with the past history of the Company, and deriving their impressions from their present associations, might perhaps be excused in their eager chase after votes, for talking against every "former control," and for feeling that any future organization which should leave them out, would "result in disaster."

But when Mr. Jervis, who has been seven years connected with the Company as Chief Engineer and Director, and nearly four years as President, is willing, for electioneering purposes, to come before the stockholders with the sweeping statement that the former "control" has proved "prejudicial to their interests," and then attempt to shield himself from any censure, and charge it all upon associates in the former direction, not one of whom has held so many, or so responsible offices, or so much power and for so long a time, in the administration of the road, as himself, it is proper that we should pause for a moment and consider the facts.

The vigorous construction of this road was entered upon in 1850, under the Presidency of George Bliss, of Massachusetts, Mr. Jervis being Chief Engineer. The road was opened to Chicago in June, 1852, when Mr. Jervis was elected President. He retained that office until April, 1855, with the exception of a few weeks during which it was held by Mr. Doxtater. In April, 1855, Mr. Wilkinson was chosen President, and remained in office until the April election in 1857. I held that position from the 7th May to the 18th August last, from which date to the 7th October, it was held by Mr. Ransom. At the latter date Mr. Jervis was again chosen. During this entire time, he also held the office of Chief Engineer of the Company; and, with the exception of a few months, he has always been a Director.

From 1850 until October, 1855, I held the position of Treasurer; from October, 1855, until April, 1857, I was absent in Europe, and had nothing whatever to do with the administration of the Company's affairs in this country.

This statement shows the official positions which have been respectively occupied in this Company by Mr. Jervis and myself, from which it may be seen who has had the largest share in that "control," of which he now complains.

It must also be borne in mind that the general duties attached to the respective offices were distinct and clearly defined.

As Chief Engineer, he had "control" of all the expenditures for purposes of construction, and for most of those for equipment. His duties led him to be constantly contracting obligations for the Company to meet; my duty was confined to providing the means of payment. No new work could be undertaken, no contracts for construction entered into, except upon estimates made or approved by him. If the cost of construction has exceeded the original estimates, is it just the thing for the Chief Engineer, who had "control" over that department, to charge its mistakes to the Treasurer, who had to find the means to pay for them?

And so in regard to the operating of the road, with which the Treasurer had no earthly connection, while the President was specially charged with its supervision, for which purpose he was clothed with ample powers over all subordinates.

If, then, the road has cost too much in its original construction, either by reason of injudicious contracts, or by mistakes in estimates; or if in its operation too large a force has been employed, or too high a speed attained, or too many trains run, or too low a tariff of prices established, whereby too large a proportion of the gross earnings has been absorbed in expenses, would any fair man think of holding the financial officer, located in New York, responsible for these results, over which he had no possible "control?"

But it may be said that, in addition to expenditures for construc ing and operating their own line, the Company has made sundry investments in other enterprises, I answer that in all cases, so far as I know, they were by original order of the Board, or subsequently approved by the Board. I may add that by far the largest portion of them were under Mr. Jervis' Presidency, the principal ones were negotiated by a Committee of the Board of which he was a member, and all were set forth and justified in the Company's report, signed by him as President, in 1854.

I do not include the Detroit and Monroe road in the foregoing statement, for no one will pretend that I had any "control" over expenditures for that line, the construction of which was authorized by the stockholders at an annual meeting, and which was commenced and completed during my absence from the country, under Mr. WILKINSON'S presidency. It is understood that nearly its entire cost entered into and formed a part of the floating debt of this company. During my aforesaid absence, nearly $600,000 were expended by the company in providing steamboats upon Lake Erie. It is a significant fact that when the last boat, costing some $300,000, was ordered to be built, Mr. JERVIS was present in Committee, and is recorded as voting for it. Mr. ELISHA C. LITCHFIELD was the only member who voted against it, while I sent from Europe, to the President of the company, my written and most earnest protest against it, as an unwise expenditure!

The Company's recent report states the cost of its steamboats at $676,932; their gross earnings for 1857 at $81,508, and the expenses for operating them at $112,875, thus showing an actual loss upon the steamboat business of the year of more than $31,000 over and above the annual wear and tear and the loss of interest upon the original investment.

Not doubting the good faith and honest judgment of those directors who sanctioned this expenditure, I refer to it simply for the purpose of showing that "the Litchfields," against whom Mr. Jervis and his associates desire "to put the stockholders on their guard," were the only members of the Board who opposed it. Is this one of the items in the former "control" of the Company for which they are to be held responsible?

When I left the service of the Company in October, 1855, it had but a small floating debt. Preparatory to funding it, the Board called upon the Chief Engineer (Mr. Jervis) for an estimate of the cash means required to complete its works then in progress. Having received that estimate, amounting to between $700,000 and $800,000, the Directors, upon an examination of their financial condition, concluded that $1,000,000 in additional cash means would suffice to complete all their works, and pay all of their floating debt. I undertook to negotiate some of the Company's securities abroad, in which I succeeded, and remitted to it in cash the sum of $1,000,000, which it required.

Prima facie, then, every debt contracted under my administration of the financeswas either paid or funded; and I felt that my personal responsibility in the matter was at an end. Accordingly I sent home my peremptory resignation as Treasurer, and as a Director; but the Company omitted to act upon, or to publish the fact.

Up to that moment, what portion of the "control," which these non-stockholders think to have been so "prejudicial," is properly to be charged to "the LITCHFIELDS' influence" to the exclusion of other members of the Board? We had in our Direction, from time to time, many able and some eminent gentlemen; and of the entire number of Directors it was my fortune, or misfortune, to be the youngest. Conscious as I am that all acted in good faith and in entire harmony to promote what, at the time, they deemed to be the interest of the Company, I cheerfully take my full share of responsibility for every act which the Board ordered, or subsequently approved. If any of these acts have since seemed to have been mistakes, is it becoming in any of the old Directors to charge their consequences upon their associates, whose position in the Company gave them less "control" over results than they exercised themselves?

Upon my return in the Spring of 1857 I found the Company staggering under a load of $2,500,000 of floating debt.

Pressed then, against my own wishes and interests, once more into the Company's service, I consented to hold, temporarily, the office of President, for the sole purpose of endeavoring to arrange the floating debt; all other duties pertaining to the office being, by special vote, devolved upon the Vice-President. The stockholders responding promptly to a scheme which I submitted, and which the Board approved, the sum of $1,500,000 was at once provided, to apply in reduction of the floating debt. The balance could have been easily carried forward upon the credit of the Company, until other arrangements for funding it could have been made, had not a quarrel broken out among the Directors, the majority of whom held large interests in the stock, while the minority were led by gentlemen holding each five shares. It was my misfortune then, as now, to have among my opponents those Directors whose aggregate interest in the stock amounted to little or nothing.

Stockholders may well ponder upon the fact that for seven years, during which time the Company was prosperous, the Board was uniformly composed of directors owning large amounts of the stock. Their interest was therefore so completely identified with that of the Company, that no private griefs, or personal objects, were allowed to interfere with that harmony of action which is the first and the indispensable condition of success. Unfortunately, at the election in April, 1857, some gentlemen were introduced into the Board who, as it subsequently appeared, were not at the time stockholders, and who, when the quarrel which they set on foot broke out into an open rupture, were found to own only five shares each.

In former years, I had seen this Company, in time of severe financial pressure and panic, with a large floating debt, but with a united Board, and officers cooperating in good faith, ride out the storm in safety; but when, for the first time in its history, TREACHERY reared its head inside of the Company's offices, and around the common council Board, and avowed the purpose of sacrificing its vital interests to gratify private hostility, it was felt to be impossible to struggle and succeed against such influences.

In order that the stockholders might be able to constitute a Board that could act in harmony, the Directors united in a general resignation and ordered a new election. Under that election the present Directors hold office, for whom I had the pleasure of casting the first vote, amounting, including the proxies held by me, to many thousand shares.

Up to the moment of my resignation of office in the Company, its credit had never been impaired, nor its paper gone to protest. I could not then, without danger to the Company, refer so fully as I now do, to the internal difficulties which were the cause of all its subsequent disasters.

Then a minority of the Board seemed determined to rule because they could not rule. The leaders of that minority held but five shares each of the stock; and yet when the election approached they, with as much modesty as is now exhibited in certain other quarters, issued their note of warning, and were as vociferous in "putting the stockholders on their guard" as Mr. JERVIS and his two trusty squires are now!

Then the new election was at hand. It was necessary to prepare the machinery which should accomplish the desired results.

The first step was to secure the use of respectable names, under which they could solicit proxies; and they did obtain permission, it seems, to use those of Messrs. Alsop, Stuart, Comstock and Olyphant for this purpose.

With the exception of Messrs. Olyphant and Stuart these gentlemen had little or no interest in the Company. Mr. Alsop none, and Mr. Comstock about the same amount. But they were supposed to be gentlemen of fairness and of fortune, and the stockholders believed their intention to be, in good faith, to take hold of the enterprise in person, and to assist, according to the implied promise of their circular, "in funding the floating debt." How far this has been done is to be seen from Mr. Jervis' recent report, showing an increase in the funded debt of $1,600,000, and a diminution in the floating debt of about one-third of that amount!

Mr. Comstock, chosen a director, soon resigned, and was succeeded by Mr. Riggs. Mr. Alsop declined to serve in the Board, and it is presumed that he subsequently found in the embarrassments of the Illinois Central Road, of which he is a prominent director, and of the Ohio and Mississippi Road, of which he is President, ample occupation for his time and means; for it is believed that he has not been able to devote any portion of either to the service of this Company.

I refrain from referring to information which appears upon the records of the Courts and the books of the Company, tending to show that those who have little interest sometimes expect large compensation for services; for I do not desire, except in self-defence, to revive old controversies, or to drag in unnecessarily the names of individuals into a communication like this.

These considerations suggest grave doubts whether, after all, gentlemen who have no pecuniary interest in the Company are the best men to manage it. Is it true that the mere fact of owning a large amount of stock—of having a man's fortune irrevocably connected with that of a corporation—in and of itself disqualifies him from being an honest, useful and safe manager? Are those whose interest is so trifling as to be unworthy of consideration more reliable agents to whom stockholders should entrust their proxies, or the management of a great corporation extending its iron track through four States, than those who have invested large portions of their fortune in the enterprise, by which its prosperity is indelibly connected with their own? Such seems to have been the theory upon which Messrs. Alsop & Company last Fall, and Messrs. Jervis & Company this Spring, have acted in issuing their circulars.

Disclaiming again any wish or intention to seek to be, or to be elected into the new Board, or any intention to speak offensively as to any individual, I address myself as a stockholder to other stockholders, and I ask by what title does any man, I care not what his position or respectability, who owns no stock in our Company, volunteer his services alone or in company with others similarly situated, to canvass for proxies for the purpose of electing managers of a property representing nearly $20,000,000? Is this a precedent which should find favor and become established in this Company? If so, shall it be made applicable to other Railroad Companies, or Banks? In short, to all other corporations?

What would be said of three gentlemen in Michigan or Illinois, who, having amassed $1,800, and invested it in stock of the American Exchange Bank, the Bank of Commerce, or any other of the leading moneyed institutions of this City, should gravely issue a circular informing the stockholders that they would like to take charge of those institutions; and in order to strengthen their own claims should heroically state that they thought former leading officers had not managed for the best interest of the corporations? Or, if those gentlemen, not caring to meddle with corporations, should take a fancy to finger the business of Alsop & Chauncey, or to make something out of the tea-trade of Olyphant Sons, or to share in the banking profits of Riggs & Co., how would an application on their part to the various partners for the control of the business of these respective houses differ in principle from the cases we see here; and how would it be met by the individual proprietors?

Cases may, and frequently do, arise when those having little or no interest in the stock of a corporation can render great service in one department or another of its management. It may even happen that the services of particular individuals are almost indispensable; but in such cases they are employed in the light of agents, and not as principals—and the owners of the property, or the Directors who represent them, are the best judges of the necessities of the case, and of the value of their services. No one has ever pretended that the proper mode to secure the best agents is to give them power to perpetuate their own authority, and to fix their own compensations.

Mr. Jervis and his associates are mistaken in saying that the "issue" at the coming election is between him or his "influence" and that of any other person or persons. Were such the "issue," I must be excused for saying that it would not be worth the ink which has already been shed upon it; for if this Corporation has not vitality irrespective of men and names, it is hardly worth preserving.

The real "issue" is between the stockholders who, owning the property, desire to see it managed in the very best manner, and those owning little or no stock, who, having no interest at stake, can offer no guarantee for their management except that honesty of purpose and general capacity for business, which they do not claim as their exclusive patrimony, but which is cheerfully conceded to them as to others. It is for the stockholders to decide.

Personally, I have no other interest in this question than that which I possess as a stockholder; and I have no feeling except that which induces me to desire the prosperity of a Corporation with which I was formerly connected, and in which so many of my friends have always held and continue to hold considerable investments. My only desire is to see this Company prosperous and restored to its old position of prominence among the important Western roads.

In addition to their interest as stockholders, the gentlemen whom Mr. Jervis and his associates attempt to proscribe, stand yet as accommodation indorsers upon the liabilities of the Company to the amount of about $350,000, which, after six months' "control" over the road and its receipts and after having added $1,600,000 to the funded debt, Mr. Jervis' administration has not yet been able or willing to discharge. They have, therefore, every inducement to seek the prosperity of the Company. I see no surer way to promote it than to let the stockholders, in entire freedom, and without outside interference, manage their own business in their own way; and I have entire confidence that the majority of the present Board, being large shareholders, will use intelligently, and with a single eye to the interests of the Company, any proxies which the stockholders may intrust to them.

EDWIN C. LITCHFIELD.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

By the Hamburg steamship Hammonia, which arrived at this port on Thursday night, we have received London evening papers of the 20th ult., and obtain from them some interesting details of the last news from India. Sir Colin Campbell, having broken up his camp at Futtyghur, arrived at Cawnpore on the 4th of February. His army, amounting to some 15,000 men, with 140 guns, followed with all possible speed. Our accounts from Cawnpore reach to the 12th of February, and by that time nearly the entire British force had crossed the Ganges. It was believed at Bombay, on the 24th of February, that before that day a grand and decisive battle had been fought at Lucknow, in which the Sepoys had assembled, some 100,000 strong, and which they had greatly strengthened since the British evacuation. The next mail from India will probably bring us intelligence of the result of the final struggle in Oude. We give, elsewhere, an interesting account of the trial of the Ex-King of Delhi, who was found guilty, and sentenced to transportation for life.

In the U. S. Senate yesterday, immediately after some unimportant moving business, the Kansas bill, as it came from the House, was taken up. Mr. Green moved that the Senate disagree with the House Amendment. Mr. Bigler, of Pennsylvania, spoke against the bill as amended at considerable length, but adduced no new arguments. Mr. Douglas said he had hoped the question would have been settled in accordance with those Democratic principles which had been the rule of his life, and if the Senate would concur in the House Amendment, it would be the triumph of those principles and would at once bring peace and quiet. Mr. Douglas proceeded at length, and with signal ability, to defend the House amendment, and to urge the Senate to concur. Mr. Pugh spoke against the Crittenden substitute, and said he should vote against it, as his instructions did not cover the present juncture. He then argued against the amendment on legal and technical grounds, and said it was useless to submit the Lecompton Constitution, as the people of Kansas would surely vote it down. He considered the bill as amended by the House, the most objectional proposition yet submitted. No other Senator desiring to speak, Mr. Green's motion was adopted, yeas 32, nays 23. Mr. Douglas desired to take up the Minnesota bill, but was prevented by calls for the yeas and nays. The Senate adjourned till Monday.

The House went once more into Committee of the Whole on the Deficiency Bill, and actually discussed it, Kansas being temporarily out of the way. Mr. Jones, of Tennessee, thought there was no evidence of rebellion in Utah. Mr. Lovejoy, of Illinois, denounced extravagant and fraudulent contracts. Mr. Faulkner, of Virginia, replied. There was a general discussion on the procurement of supplies for the Quartermaster's Department. Mr. Phelps, of Missouri, defended the Utah Expedition and the estimates of the War Department. The House adjourned till Monday.

The Legislature, now that the close of the session is approaching, is hurrying up the business before it with a speed rivaling that of former years, and apparently with the same recklessness as "Grinding Committees" are at work for both Houses in preparing bills for action, and appearances indicate that about all the consideration the bills receive is while in the hands of these Committees. A glance at the summary of the business done yesterday, will be sufficient to satisfy any one that this must necessarily be the case. Various matters of immediate interest in this locality were acted upon.

We learn from Albany that the Canal Board have resolved to reduce tolls from 4 to 2 mills on merchandise, and on Flour from 3 to 2 mills on the 1,000 pounds per mile.

The steamer Sultan, running on the Mississippi River, was burned to the water's edge, and sunk near Cape Girardeau, 150 miles below St. Louis, at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, involving the loss of 15 or 20 lives. Particulars of the catastrophe have not reached us.

The body of the murdered youth, which was taken from the river at the foot of Beekman-street, on Thursday, was yesterday identified as that of Chas L. Samuels, the son of Mr. Chas. Samuels, leather dealer, of No 235 Adams-street, Brooklyn. He was about 20 years of age, and had always resided at home, and assisted in his father's store. He left home on Saturday night, and was not missed until Sunday morning, when his friends supposed he had gone to see an aunt in the West. The daguerreotype of a beautiful young lady, to whom he was paying his addresses, was found upon his person. Thomas Curtis, who kept an oyster saloon at the corner of Burling-slip and South-street, in whose company he was last seen, has been arrested upon suspicion of being the murderer, and Patrick Katon is held as an accomplice. Late in the day a woman, connected with Curtis in some way, was also arrested. All the prisoners are detained at the Second Ward Station-house. Coroner Connery yesterday impanneled a Jury, and examined several witnesses, when the inquest was adjourned to 11 o'clock to-day. The body still remains at the Second Ward Station-house.

Some shrewd swindlers, assuming the name of Oliphant, Bartlett & Co., and claiming to be extensive manufacturers of West India coffee, have been for the past month doing a heavy business in swindling country merchants. They commenced with sending 15,000 circulars to the leading merchants in every city and county in the Union, constituting them agents for the sale of their coffee. As the fruit of their enterprise they have lately been in the receipt of letters remitting over $1,000 daily. A man named George Bradley, alleged to be at the bottom of the swindle, has fled from the City to escape arrest. Mr. Phillips, his clerk, was arrested yesterday, the only one thus far captured.

The Anti-Lecompton victory in the House was commemorated last night by a salute of 120 guns, fired from the Battery at sunset, and a display of fire-works in the Park in the evening. The names of John B. Haskins and Horace F. Clark, the two Democratic members from this City who voted with the majority, formed the centre-piece of the final display.

The Drift of Political Parties.

The Journal of Commerce seems unable to think of a newspaper except as the leader, the champion, or the tool, of some political party. Its own position probably colors its conception of the position of other journals, and it accordingly treats our comments of Thursday last, upon the tendency of party organizations, as the disclosure of a "new combination which has been for some time under the process of incubation at Washington,"—of which the Times appears to be the "champion." We decline all these imputed honors, and beg the Journal to understand that we are not in the service of this, or any other, political party. We shall judge it, as we endeavor to judge all others, fairly and impartially, by its principles and its purposes, and shall support or oppose it as our conviction of its merits and the welfare of the country may require.

The Journal considers a political party as a mere cob-house, to be built up and toppled down at the pleasure of intriguers. But this is a very great mistake. Parties grow naturally out of the public sentiment of the country, and they will be just what that sentiment makes them. The Republican Party of 1856 grew out of the public conviction that the political power of the slaveholding class was acquiring an undue ascendency over the National Government. The American party grew out of the public sentiment that the foreign element was becoming unduly powerful in our affairs, and needed a check. The Republican Party lost ground in 1857 because Mr. Buchanan's policy, at the outset of his administration, promised to restore the just balance of political power, and thus remedy the evil which had called that party into existence. In the early policy of the Administration in regard to Kansas, the country saw evidence of a purpose to redress the wrongs of that Territory, to secure its inhabitants in the full enjoyment of their civil rights, and to protect them in establishing such institutions and framing such a government as they should choose: and nothing in national politics contributed more largely to the victory of the Democrats in New-York last Fall than the action of Governor Walker, prompted and sustained as it was by the President and his Cabinet. If Mr. Buchanan had gone on in this course, steadily and resolutely,—if he had sustained the people of Kansas in the practical assertion of their rights, against the intrigues and the violence of the Pro-Slavery minority, he would have strengthened his hold upon the confidence of the nation, and given the Democratic Party an impregnable position. The entire North, with the possible exception of New-England, would have come to his support,—the leading conservative men of all parties in the South would have sustained him, and even the ultra Pro-Slavery propagandists would have been compelled to acquiesce in, even if they could not applaud, his just and straightforward policy. No President ever had a more splendid opportunity to consolidate his party, and give it permanent stability, than Mr. Buchanan:—and no President ever threw it away so soon.

The Journal makes rather a melancholy attempt at being facetious over the fusion of the Republicans, Americans and Anti-Lecompton Democrats. It indulges in humorous references to natural history,—and wonders which of these parties is to swallow the other,—or whether three distinct species are to emerge at once from the chrysalis state and become united in one body, either like or unlike either of the originals. This is very smart, but not very sensible. Talking about grubs and anacondas, settles nothing concerning the future of political parties. It is undoubtedly difficult to harmonize conflicting parties and bring them to act together; but it can be done, and Mr. Buchanan is doing it. He has invented a test which divides his own party and unites all others. He removed Walker and Stanton, men of his own appointment, for following his own instructions. He punished the men who had defeated the gigantic and outrageous frauds of Oxford County and Kickapoo. He made himself and his Administration a party to the trickery and thimble-rigging of the Lecompton Convention,—trickery which all the honest, upright, fair-dealing men of all parties and all sections regarded with disgust, and would have scouted with scorn. The great mass of the Southern people,—the best men of the Southern States,—would have scorned to win a paltry advantage for themselves or their section by the open and outrageous swindling of which the President became the practical champion, and to which he insists on committing the Democratic Party. The natural result of all this has been to throw him thoroughly and entirely into the hands of the ultra Pro-Slavery, fire-eating, Disunion faction of the Southern States. He has no active, zealous supporters beyond their circle. He gives them his confidence,—his patronage and his future. He has driven from his Administration the most influential Democratic Senator in the North, and the ablest and most powerful statesman of his own party in the South,—while he has repelled the great body of the American Party which stood ready to support his Administration upon any fair basis of national and conservative principle.

Perhaps the Journal may see in these facts some of the influences which are consolidating and nationalizing the elements of Opposition to the present Administration. As things stand to-day, Mr. Buchanan could not carry a single Northern State, with the possible exception of New-Jersey. If things go on in their present course, within the next year Mr. Buchanan's most active and zealous supporters, with Toombs and Stephens at their head, will blossom out into full-grown Disunionists, and will either constrain the President to tolerate their schemes or will become his open and bitter enemies. In either case, they will call out and build up a Conservative Union party in the Southern States, which will have Wise, Bell, Crittenden, Winter Davis and others for its leaders and the combined Opposition of the North and West for its active and efficient allies. We have had one Union party arrayed against the Abolitionism of the North; we shall soon have another against the Disunionism of the South.

The Army Bill—A New-York Regiment Accepted.—We learn that six military organizations of this City have severally tendered their services to the President of the United States, as volunteers under the Army Bill, which passed the Senate on Thursday; and that the offer of one of them,—Col. Burnham's Regiment,—has been accepted. By the provisions of the Bill the President is authorized to raise two regiments, exclusive of the Texas regiment. One of the two having thus been accepted from New-York, it is understood the other will be assigned to Pennsylvania.

The English at Lucknow.

The "army of lions" have found at last a lion to lead them. Sir Colin Campbell has been following up his début in India with the steady and triumphant perseverance of a great man and a great General. Military writers have already paid their tribute to the masterly skill with which he moved his forces upon Lucknow through a country swarming with enemies; to the energy with which he traversed a city in arms to relieve his countrymen, beleaguered in a palace which valor and fortitude had converted into a true Spartan fortress, and to the adroitness with which he withdrew the rescued and their rescuers in safety from that perilous post, to commence, upon a scale of proper grandeur and efficiency, his work of reducing the warlike kingdom of Oude and the revolted Bengal army to obedience. The latest news from Bombay, received yesterday by the Hammonia, from Southampton, shows that the Highland General has been conducting the most important campaign which England has seen in India since the days of Clive, with a combined brilliancy, patience, decision and success, which establish his claim to a high and permanent rank among the masters of the military art. While he has suffered the masses of his enemies to drift gradually together upon Lucknow, that he may there inclose them in a wall of flame and steel, and crush them in one supreme and critical hour, he has kept the wings of his own army clear, by sweeping the country behind his advance in great retiring circles.

The rebels of the Rohilcund to the northwest of Oude were held in check by the threatening advance of a Sikh force from the Punjaub. The mutineers of the Gwalior Contingent, known recently as the "Calpee Insurgents," by whom the troops under General Windham were so severely harassed some time since, are pressed in between the main English army and the army of Central India under Sir Hugh Rose, who has been clearing the Malwa country and the Bundelcund to the south of Sir Colin Campbell and the scene of action in Oude. To the eastward of Lucknow the insurgents are menaced by Jung Bahadoor, the energetic Nepaulese Premier, who was lying before Fyzabad, about sixty miles to the southeast of Lucknow, at the beginning of February, with an army of his gallant Ghoorkas, waiting for ammunition to arrive from Benares, about six days' march distant. The Nepaulese were supported by General Franks, who held a position to the east of the road between Fyzabad and Benares with an English brigade.

At Lucknow itself, about 100,000 Sepoys and Indians, of all arms, were believed to be assembled, and the city defences are supposed to have been greatly strengthened since the retreat of the English from the Residency. Against this heart of the war Sir Collin Campbell was preparing, on the 11th of February, to march from the Ganges with his whole army of 15,000 men, and 140 pieces of artillery, more than half of which were heavy siege-guns. His road, as far as the Alumbagh, five miles from Lucknow, was kept by strong bodies of English troops, and the Alumbagh itself was held by Sir James Outram, who had not been attacked since Jan. 10, when the Sepoys were repulsed with great loss.

In view of these preparations, and of this posture of affairs, it is more than probable that a great battle was fought at Lucknow about the end of February. If that battle shall have resulted, as there was every reason to suppose it would, in an conspicuous victory of the English arms, that event will hardly exercise in India itself a more important influence than in Europe. It will fortify materially the prestige of Great Britain on the Continent, and give renewed effect to the language, and new strength to the attitude of the English Press and Parliament on the question of the French Refugees. We may easily understand, therefore, that the next dispatches from India are expected in England with almost as much impatience as in the first days of the Indian Mutiny. It would indeed be difficult to exaggerate the importance of their possible bearing upon the development of the great issues which are now secretly or overtly agitating the world of European politics.

The civil warfare between the English authorities and their mutinous enemies was also advancing in a sense favorable to the English. The Nena Sahib, broken in power as a military leader, was wandering about the country with a few followers, like the Pretender after Culloden, and moving restlessly from point to point, in the hope of evading the relentless pursuit of his enemies, whose offered rewards and evident triumph have combined to convert the bulk of the population into a body of detectives for his arrest. On the other hand, a much more important personage, whose revolt from the English cause has excited great uneasiness, has come forward openly and humanely in their interest. Maun Singh, the largest landholder and most influential noble of Oude, has preserved, and sent from Lucknow, about forty or fifty women and children. This step probably indicates his own intention of making up for the past with the winning party. There was a report, indeed, that some kinsman of the old King of Delhi had proclaimed himself King of India, and meant to begin a guerilla warfare. Butt his lacks confirmation; and the public humiliation of the imbecile old heir of the Moguls will probably assure the stability of the English rule, at least for the present, in Northern and Central India.

The Nuisance of Beggars.—Why do not the police interfere to stop—or at least to check—the enormous and increasing nuisance of street-beggars? There is scarcely a street in the upper part of the City which is not filled with them. Ladies and gentlemen walking in the Fifth-avenue, Broadway and Union Square, are constantly beset by men, women, and especially children, who run after, and tease them for alms. This is a most annoying nuisance, and should be stopped. The offenders are professional beggars, and make no pretence of getting a living by any other means. The law is very explicit and stringent against them,—but it seems to be never enforced. Will not Mr. Superintendent Tallmadge give the matter some attention?

The Kansas Bill.

The opponents of the Lecompton swindle exulted loudly last night, with cannon and fireworks in the Park, over the defeat of the Kansas bill in the House of Representatives. The rejoicing was quite natural and perfectly proper;—we only hope it may not prove to have been premature. The crisis of the Kansas bill is not passed. Indeed, it has only just entered upon its most perilous stage.

The Senate voted to force the Lecompton Constitution upon the people. The House voted to submit it first to their suffrages. This is the precise point of disagreement. The bill is now in the Senate, and the pending question is whether the Senate will not also consent to submit the Constitution to the popular vote. If that body still refuses, then it will be for the House to say whether they will insist upon such submission as a condition of the admission of Kansas into the Union. We hope they will, but are not without fears that they will not. Every possible effort will be made to persuade the Democrats and Southern Americans that, having done all in their power to secure the submission of the Constitution, they can easily vindicate themselves to their constituents for assenting to the admission of the State as a last resort, and when it was quite certain that nothing better could be done. On the other hand, it will be strongly and justly urged that they are already committed, personally and politically, to the principle that the people ought to have a chance to vote upon the Constitution under which they are required to live; and, as the question is preëminently one of principle, it is to be hoped they will maintain the position they have taken.

If the matter is left just as it stands now, the appeal to the country will be upon the right of the people to make their own laws. The issue will be directly and unmistakably upon the principle of the Crittenden amendment;—and a simpler or stronger one could not be desired.

The Kansas Bill in the Senate.—When the Kansas bill came up in the Senate yesterday, Mr. Green, of Missouri, immediately moved to disagree with the House amendment. After remarks by Messrs. Bigler and Pugh, in support of the motion, and by Mr. Douglas against it, the question was taken, and Mr. Green's motion prevailed—yeas, 32; nays, 23.

So the Senate refuses to concur, and the bill goes back to the House for its action thereon. It is scarcely possible that the House will not insist on its amendment, and there is thus a prospect of an irreconcilable difference between the two branches of Congress on this vexed question. If no agreement eventually takes place, the bill is lost. But we trust there may be sufficient patriotism in the Senate to recede from its position, and permit the admission of Kansas under a Constitution which her citizens can approve.

The Park.—We observe workmen busy in planting new trees in the Park. They will never attain old age or great size. The Park is needed and destined for other uses. It will, undoubtedly, be mainly preserved as an open space, though one or two handsome public buildings may hereafter be erected upon it. But it is not needed as an ornamental square, and cannot long be preserved as such. What is very much required is a large open space for the display and manœuvring of the military, and the Park is admirably adapted to this object. The trees, posts and grass plats should be cleared away in front of the City Hall so as to leave a parade-ground at least three times as large as the present one. The military organizations of the City could then display their discipline and their equipments to great advantage. The Park will one day be the Champ de Mars of New-York.

The Kansas Bill.—Gen. Duff Green publishes a letter in the Washington States insisting that the South ought to resist the Lecompton bill, out of regard for its own honor as well as its interests. Being in a minority, he says, the South cannot afford to put herself in the wrong.

Musical.

Academy of Music.—A Matinée on an extended and excellent plan will be given here to-day, commencing at 1 o'clock. It is the first occasion of Mr. Thalberg's appearance in New-York since his successful tour in the South and West. Mr. H. C. Cooper and Miss Milner will also assist Mr. Thalberg as soloists, and an orchestra, under the the direction of Carl Anschutz, will play several instrumental pieces. It is an excellent concert and will surely be well attended.

Mr. Satter's Concert.—Mr. Satter gives his third concert to-night, at the Mozart Assembly Rooms. The programme contains some of Mr. Satter's most effective compositions and transcriptions. Madame Johannsen, the German prima donna, Mr. Louis Schreiber, the celebrated cornet player, Mr. Mollenhauer, Mr. Bergner and Mr. Candido Berti, (piano,) assist Mr. Satter.

New-York Volunteers for Utah.

The decision to employ two volunteer regiments for the Utah service, has created quite an excitement among the military men of this City. Some six military organizations here have volunteered, and the President is said to have expressed a willingness to accept of the services of the regiment known as Col. Burnham's. It is also stated that the other regiment will be accepted from Pennsylvania.

American Bible Society.—The stated meeting of the Managers was held at the Bible House, Astor Place, April 1, at 4½ o'clock; Hon. Luther Bradish in the chair. Rev. Dr. McLeod read the 25th Psalm, and Rev. Dr. Spring offered prayer.

Four new societies were recognized, two in Missouri, one in Arkansas, and one in Texas.

After communications had been presented with encouraging statements in regard to the spread of the Scriptures, an account was given by one of the Secretaries of the sudden death of Rev. D. Dezuelle, the Society's Agent in North Carolina.

Sundry grants were made of Bibles and Testaments, and letters were received from Rev. Drs. McLeod, Goodrich, McClintock and Smith accepting the appointment to the Committee on Versions. The Rev. Dr. Turner declined, for the reasons alleged in his letter of resignation, and Dr. Bethune, on account of numerous personal engagements. The last meeting of the Society's year showed a much more encouraging state of affairs than, from the pressure of the times for several months past, there were strong reasons to fear.

Police Intelligence.

Paying the Police.—The members of the Police Department yesterday morning received pay for their last month's services. The amount of money paid out is a trifle over $68,000, which is divided among 1,168 men, the present number on the pay-roll.

Altering Bank Bills.—Captain Speight, of Twenty-first Ward, arrested yesterday morning Wm. Howe, whom he caught in the act of altering bank bills. He was found engaged altering bills on the Farmers' Bank of Wickford, Rhode Island, to Farmers' Bank of Bridgeport, Connecticut, and Farmers' Bank of Hudson, this State. A quantity of the bills were all ready to put into circulation. The alterations are skilfully done. The prisoner and his "tools" were taken to the Station house to await an examination before a police magistrate.

City Items.

The Chamber of Commerce held its Quarterly meeting on Thursday evening, at Clinton Hall. Several gentlemen were admitted members of the Chamber. The annual dues of the members were increased from $3 to $10. The President announced that there was $1,600 in the Treasury. The Committee on Location reported that rooms had been hired in the new building corner of Cedar and William streets. Mr. J. Smith Homans was elected Secretary of the Chamber for one year, and the salary fixed at $1,000 a year. A communication was received from the Secretary of the Treasury in relation to certain grievances complained of by the New-York merchants in the routine of the Custom-House business. The letter acquiesced in the necessity of the changes demanded, and several gentlemen were named as a Committee to act with three importers to be named by the Chamber, to make the required regulations. Resolutions were adopted condemning the bill before the Legislature proposing to give exclusive use of certain slips and piers to the owners of steamboats. Also, a series of resolutions opposed to the increase of the rates of wharfage. The Senate bill upon Mr. Rogers' code of signals was referred to a Committee, to report at the next meeting.

About noon, yesterday, there was considerable excitement at the Hudson River Railroad dépôt, caused by the head of a barrel falling out and disclosing a dead body packed inside. The barrel arrived in the City Thursday morning, and was consigned to Wm. B. Jennings, No. 185 Leonard-street; there not being so many numbers in Leonard-street, and no such person to be found as the one indicated, the barrel was taken back to the dépôt. The body, on examination, was found in excellent preservation, the head and thighs having been severed. It appears to be that of a man about 35 years of age. The hair is black and cut short to the head; the face fair and round. The freight agent traces the barrel to Niagara Falls, but it is probable that it was placed on the railroad at some point further west. It is positive that it has not been subjected to any anatomical process, but is probably the subject of some mysterious murder. Coroner Mills had the corpse removed to the dead-house of Bellevue Hospital, where an inquest will be held to day.

The long-protracted case of Flagg vs. Smith and Fitzpatrick, came again before the Recorder yesterday in the Court-Room of the General Sessions. Comptroller Flagg was a second time placed on the stand for cross examination by Mr. Graham, but his evidence, though of an interesting nature, was only confirmatory of the facts already published.

Yesterday was Good Friday, and was religiously observed in the Episcopalian and Roman Catholic churches. At the former there was morning service, and at the latter early mass was attended early in the morning. The weather was fine, and the churches generally were full. At Trinity Church, after morning service, Rev. Mr. Ogilby preached the sermon, dwelling upon the Christian duty of confessing Christ. A sexton's mace of oak was presented to the new sexton, Mr. Augustus W. Meurer. Bishop Potter will administer the rite of confirmation to about 60 persons at this church on Saturday afternoon, at 3 o'clock P. M.

Since the enterprise of C. E. Todd & Co., in Broome-st., was broken up, over 6,000 letters, addressed to the proprietors, have been taken from the Post Office. These letters contained over $8 000. The money has all been sent back to the writers with the following note from the Mayor: "Inclosed you will find the sum remitted by you to C. E. Todd & Co., who have been arrested in this City. Be on your guard against all gift enterprises, lotteries, and all other bogus schemes, as they are intended to defraud only the unwary.

DANIEL F. TIEMANN, Mayor."

The new propeller Huntsville, of Cromwell's Savannah line, made a trial trip yesterday, going round the Light-ship and returning toward evening. There was a large party on board. The working of the steamer and her engines was very satisfactory She is designed for passengers as well as freight.

The Republican Nominating Convention of the Seventh Ward, Brooklyn, reassembled last night to fill the vacancy in their ticket, for the city election on Tuesday next, caused by Dr. Tuthill's declining to stand as a candidate for Alderman. Wm. A. Cobb, Esq., was called to the Chair, and Dr. Tuthill appointed Secretary. Without the formality of a ballot the Convention, by acclamation, nominated Samuel H. Turner for Alderman. The announcement of the result was warmly applauded. Mr. Turner is one of the best-known residents of the Ward, and from present appearances is likely to be elected easily.

The New-York Book-Publishers' Association Trade Sale was opened on Thursday, at the sales-rooms of Messrs. G. A. Leavitt & Co. From two to three hundred bupers were present, and the sale proceeded with spirit. Large numbers of Parton's Life of Burr, Lossing's History of the United States, Bertini's Method for the Piano, and other popular publications of Messrs. Mason Brothers, were disposed of at good prices. The invoices of Little, Brown & Co., and Blanchard & Lea, were reached yesterday, and the invoices of R. M. Dewitt and G. P. Putnam were sold.

The prayer-meeting at Burton's old theatre, yestesday, was large, though not so much crowded as it sometimes has been, neither was the John-street meeting. At the former Mr. D. C. Green, a merchant, presided, and the Rev. Edward F. Strickland, formerly an actor, was among those who briefly addressed the audience.

Officer Von Wart, of the Eighteenth Ward, discovered an Irishman, at an early hour yesterday morning, coming out of the boot and shoe store of Dennis Jackson, No. 350 Fourth avenue, with about $150 worth of boots and shoes. He arrested the fellow and had him locked up to answer a charge of burglary.

The American Guard, 71st Regiment, assembled last evening, at their drill-room, corner of White and Elm streets, and practiced the manœuvres in the school of the battalion, to the admiration of a select party of spectators. There will be another drill on the 5th instant.

Max Stearn, a German, nearly 60 years old, was arrested yesterday charged with violating the person of Sarah Dangingen, aged 10 years, at Saugerties, Ulster County, in September last. She had been left in his charge by her relatives who departed for California about a year ago. He was held to answer.

At a "free fight," about 11 o'clock last night, in Johnson's negro dance cellar, in Roosevelt near Oak-street, a man named Moore was stabbed in the face by the barkeeper of the place, whose name is Wilson. The wound is not considered fatal. Johnson's is a great place for fights.

Tyler, alias Crawford, was arrested and held for trial yesterday on a charge of stealing a horse and wagon worth $400, the property of William Lent, No. 1,000 Broadway.

William Howe was yesterday committed to Prison on a charge of altering bills on the Farmers' Bank of Wickford, Rhode Island.

The body of a man has been lying on the bank of the Passaic River, near the Erie Railroad, for three or four days.

Fireworks in Honor of the Anti-Lecompton Victory.

The Anti-Lecompton victory in the House of Representatives was celebrated last evening, by an impromptu display of fireworks in the Park, and a salute of 120 guns at the Battery. The demonstration was suggested by a few leading Republicans, after the receipt of the news from Washington on Thursday. John Jay, Mr. Greeley, Mr. Maniérre, of the Young Men's Republican Club, and others, superintended the display. Two brass 6-pounders were discharged from the Battery. The firing began shortly before sunset. Quite a crowd assembled, many of whom seemed at a loss to know the occasion of the demonstration. A gentleman mounted a stone post, and explained that the guns were fired in honor of the 120 Representatives in Congress who had voted to sustain the people of Kansas in their right to form their own Constitution, uninfluenced by outsiders.

There was a display of fireworks in the Park in the evening. Rockets were discharged from the roof of the City Hall, variegated fireworks were "set off," and the whole ended with a pyrotechnic ovation to Messrs. Clark and Haskin. In the centre were emblazoned the names of

JOHN B. HASKIN.
HORACE F. CLARK.

At the right were the words

FREE KANSAS,

surmounted by an eagle.

At the left were the words,

HONOR TO THE PEOPLE'S HOUSE,
120 to 112.

Besides, there were some 3,000 people gathered in the Park, who appeared highly delighted with the display.

Brooklyn City Items.

Our readers will remember that Mr. R. T. Byrne, of Brooklyn, was reported as arrested on a charge of embezzlement, which consisted in the allegation of his having received from his brother in Detroit a trunk of goods in payment for salary due him as agent or buyer for the house of James P. Byrne, of Detroit, who was then about to fail, and chose to prefer his brother for a few hundred dollars worth of goods. This fact was magnified by affidavits into a charge of felony against Mr. Robert T. Byrne, the recipient, and he was arrested and brought before Justice Blachley, of Brooklyn, where the bail was fixed at $4,000, two sureties in $2,000 each. This was subsequently reduced by Judge Moseis to $500 nominal bail, and on Thursday the bill against Mr. Byrne was dismissed by the Grand Jury.

Another Supposed Murder.—Yesterday morning the body of a man was taken out of Gowanus Creek, at the foot of Carrol-street, and was identified during the day as that of James Maguire, who has been missing for two months past. His family and friends supposed he had enlisted in the army. They made search for him when he first disappeared, and traced him to a porter-house near Gowanus Canal, where he had a quarrel with a man, who threatened to knock his brains out. From this place he was traced, as was then supposed, to Governor's Island, where he enlisted as John Murphy. The body found is fully identified, and bears marks of violence on the back part of the head. Coroner Snell will investigate the matter to-day.

A man named Henry Miller was arrested yesterday, and committed to answer a charge of attempted arson. It is alleged that he hired a man named Augustus Walter to set fire to his (Miller's) premises, corner of Henry and Cranberry streets, where he occupied two rooms, and had an insurance on his furniture of $1,000. Walter, instead of setting the premises on fire, informed the Police, and had Miller arrested.

Three of the "Continental Blues," named Mullen, Doyle and Duffy, were sent to the Penitentiary for three months yesterday, by Justice Cornwell, for stealing. Three more of the gang were arrested, but not identified. It was a member of this gang that was killed by Gallagher, who is now under sentence of death.

A young woman attempted to commit suicide Thursday by jumping into the East River from one of the Wall street ferry boats. She was rescued by an officer of the boat and taken to New-York. She said she had not earned anything for four days, and was determined upon self-destruction.

A man named William Harkness fell from a building on Vanderbilt, near Gates-avenue, yesterday, and received serious injuries. He was taken to the City Hospital for treatment.

The disturbance at the Reservoir, near East New-York, has been entirely quelled. Several of the leaders were arrested yesterday, and a majority of the strikers were glad to recommence work.

A man named John Blitz died at the City Hospital yesterday from injuries received last Saturday on Ford's dock, by several bags of grain falling upon him. Coroner Snell held an inquest.

Patrick Eagan, an employe in Barker's Pork-Packing establishment, Red Hook Point, was arrested yesterday, and committed to answer for robbing his employer.

A child 2½ years old, named Edward Hennigan, residing at the corner of Baltic and Furman streets, fell into a tub of water, and was drowned. Coroner Snell held an inquest.

The Revolution in Montevideo.

DEFEAT OF THE REVOLUTIONISTS—BUTCHERY OF THE PRISONERS BY ORDER OF THE GOVERNMENT—INTERCESSION OF THE FOREIGN MINISTERS—REMOVAL OF THE UNITED STATES CONSULATE FROM MONTEVIDEO.

We published on Thursday advices from Montevideo to the 4th of February, announcing the termination of the revolution in a battle, and the subsequent butchery of their prisoners by the Government forces. The following letter, received in Salem, Mass., and dated Montevideo, Feb. 6, gives particulars not previously published, of the battle in question, and of the horrible scenes that followed. The writer says:

"We are still in a state of civil war in this unfortunate Province. This time there has been much bloodshed—some 700 lives having already been sacrificed to the cause of Liberty. (How that word is at used!)

Gen. Dias was defeated, about a week since, some 250 miles in the interior, and over 300 prisoners surrendered to the Government troops. After sending to this place, to the Government, to know what disposition should be made of the prisoners, the President sent orders, in an hour afterwards, to shoot 38 officers, and cut the throats of nearly 200 of the soldiers.

Among the officers were General Cæsar Dias, who has been serving his country all his life time, and was in command of the forces from this Province when Rosas fell, and a man who bore an excellent character; Gen. Frare, one of the veterans of thirty-three, and his son, a Colonel; with other officers of not much lower grade.

This has been one of the most brutal butcheries that ever stained the annals of this country. It outstrips Rosas and Oribe altogether. When it was known that the order had been sent out for this wholesale slaughter, the English and French Ministers and both Admirals, the Spanish Minister, American Commodore and American Consul, all went to see the President, to supplicate mercy for these poor fellows, but in vain.

About twenty of the first ladies of the place also went, among whom were the sister of the President's wife, Señora Vidal, Señora Castellanos, wife of the President of the Senate; Mrs. Hoquiera, President of the Charitable Association; the widow of Gen. Pacheco, the widow of Gen. Lavellica, and, indeed, all were ladies of the first respectability. They even went down on their knees, supplicating pardon for those Oriental officers, but they were turned away with insult, and the poor fellows were shot like dogs.

All of them leave large families, which were entirely dependent upon them for support. It has placed the whole city in mourning. No decent lady appears in the street without being dressed in deep mourning. Everybody, of both political parties, is horror-stricken at this awful destruction of life.

The consequence will, I hear, be dreadful, and we begin to see it already. The cavalry escaped at the surrender of Dias, and have been making dreadful work. They have already visited several villages, and cut the throat of every blanco they encountered—men, women and children—and destroyed their property to as great an extent as possible. This vengeance does not fall upon the guilty only, but on any of the adherents of the party that did the awful deed above mentioned.

Last year we had the yellow fever, which carried off about 2,000 of the inhabitants of this place, and now this civil war is continuing the destruction of human lives.

Mr. Hamilton, U. S. Consul at Montevideo, has sent part of his furniture, which he wished to keep, on board the bark Kate, which sails next week for Baltimore. He expects to have an auction of the rest next week, when he intends to close up the Consulate and go to Buenos Ayres, to stay a few weeks with his daughter, Mrs. Zimmerman, previous to his embarking for the United States.

He is just recovering from another attack of sickness, is very much broken down, and very infirm. Mrs. Hamilton is very well. They, like many others, are completely disgusted with Montevideo after the recent occurrences.

Business has all been stopped since the disturbances commenced, and quien sabe when tranquillity and confidence will be restored.

Senator Douglas and the Illinois Delegation

From the Congressional Globe.

Eleventh street, Saturday, March 27, 1858.

I observe in the Daily Globe of this morning that the Hon. William Smith is reported as having said in the House, on yesterday, "that the delegation from Illinois, or a portion of them at any rate, met together here, when Congress assembled, to consider the course which a certain gentleman in the other end of the Capitol should pursue, and the means he should use to secure his reélection to the United States Senate. I say that much; and I will make out the case when I have the time. I say that that certainly extraordinary action has resulted in a concerted movement having an eye alone to his reélection."

As far as I am concerned there is not one word of truth in the above statement. Being too ill to reach the House, I beg you to give this the same publicity with the charge. Yours, respectfully,

THOMAS L. HARRIS.

Personal.

Hon. Charles Sumner left New-York yesterday morning for Washington.

Surrender of Billy Bowlegs.—The Madison (Fla.) Messenger has reliable information that Billy Bowlegs "has surrendered his sword, and is now at Tampa with his whole party, waiting the consummation of arrangements now being made, to be transferred to the West. It is said the old gentleman was in a shockingly ragged and dirty condition when he presented himself at Tampa."

THE MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

The Body of the Drowned Youth Identified by the Father—Arrests on Suspicion.

On Thursday afternoon about 2 o'clock a boatman, who follows the business of dragging for old rope, &c., while opposite the foot of Beekman-street, hauled up the body of a young man, which had evidently lain but a short time in the water. Attached to it by a strong cord was a stone weighing some 50 pounds, which was ingeniously slung by pieces of bedcord, part of hemp and part of manila. The knots in the cord indicated that they were tied by two different persons, some being such as sailors tie, others of the sort which seamen never make—"granny knots." From the great number of hitches made, and the precautions to prevent the stone, which was of irregular shape, from slipping out of its sling, considerable time and great deliberation must have been had. The body was conveyed to the Second Ward Station-house, where it remained over night, no one appearing to identify it. Upon examining it a contused wound was observed upon the forehead, and on taking off the clothing a stab was discovered in the left breast, directly over the heart. The pockets were all turned wrong-side out, except the watch fob, in which 50 cents in change was found. Upon further examination a watch-guard was discovered about the neck, to which was attached a little patent-leather bag; on opening this a velvet bound miniature was found of a beautiful young lady, with dark hair and eyes, and dressed in black silk, with a cameo breast pin and collar. This circumstance at once dissipated all anxiety as to the possibility of identifying the body. A gentleman who saw the picture, at once thought recognizad the features, and in company with Captain WEED proceeded to the business-place of the brother-in-law of the lady, where it was at once identified. Information was then sent to the father of the murdered young man, who lives in Brooklyn, and proved to be MR. CHARLES SAMUEL, leather dealer, No. 235 Adams-street.

Dr. GEO. F. WOODWARD having been sent for, proceeded to make a post mortem examination of the body. The following is his statement:

Upon a post mortem examination of the body of the unknown young man found in the water at the foot of Beekman-street, yesterday afternoon, a wound was found one inch in width about one inch to the left of the medial line, on a line with the nipple. The direction of the wound was downwards and inwards, passing through the sternum, entering the pericardium and penetrating the left ventricle of the heart, the wound in the heart being about three-eighths of an inch in width. The pericardium was distended with coagulated blood, the wound being, in his opinion, sufficient to have caused death; there were no other external marks of violence except some bruises about the face, which may have been caused while in the water.

Officers UNDERHILLER and CLINE brought two men named THOS. CURTIS and PATRICK KATON into the Station-house, under suspicion of the murder. The former keeps an oyster-stand at the corner of Burling-slip and South-street, and from the fact of his having been seen, together with KATON, in company with the deceased just before his disappearance, the officers were induced to arrest him. It was also noticed that CURTIS's stand was closed shortly after he was seen with the young man, and remained closed until yesterday morning.

Coroner CONNERY, having arrived, impannelled the following jury:

Israel Underhill, No. 43 Lafayette-place.
Rollin H. Burrough, No. 169 William-street.
Alvah W. Lockwood, No. 75 Beekman-street.
D. H. Halt, No. 14 Beekman-street.
M. P. Darich, No. 75 Beekman-street.
Abel Wood, Jr., No. 49 Concord-street, Brooklyn.
Augustus Smith, No. 31 Beekman street.
Charles Hooper, No. 76 South Third-street, Williamsburg.
J. C. Hall, No. 55 Beekman-street.
T. Lewis, No. 26 South Fourth-street, Williamsburg.
S. C. Howard, No. 472 Broadway.
S. E. Clark, No. 472 Broadway.

The first witness called was Stephen B. Haff, West Forty-second-street. He did not know the young man; had seen him several times, about the Fulton Hotel, No. 89 South-street; saw him last on Sunday evening; witness asked several captains present to take a drink; the young man took a cigar; he was perfectly sober; witness never heard his name; he was alone; having heard of the occurrence, witness came to the Second Precinct Station-house, and recognized deceased as the man who took a cigar with him on Sunday evening last; did not know whether he boarded at the hotel or not.

Francis Howard called and sworn—Lives at No. 89 South-street; is bartender at the Fulton Hotel; had seen the body of deceased, and recognized it as that of the man he saw for the first time at the Fulton Hotel, on Wednesday last; he came in and bought some cigars of witness; appeared to be perfectly sober; his looks betrayed no anxiety or strong emotion; had no conversation with him; witness left the place at five o'clock; deceased was not in the house when he left.

Witness recalled—She could not say it was the same person she saw go into Curtis' place; he was disfigured. [The daguerreotype of the young lady found on the body was passed round and viewed by the jury.]

The clothes, a black frock coat, black vest, &c., were shown to witness, but she could only say that the young man wore black clothes, and gaiter shoes; she saw the young man talking to Thomas Curtis; he was a smart young man of nice features, but she could not tell positively if this was the same person or not; Tom Curtis was sitting on the bench, and the young man was speaking with him; he came up, and after a few words he shook his head, and turned away; it was late in the evening.

Charles Samuel, No. 235 Adams-street, Brooklyn, sworn—I recognize the body of deceased as that of my son; I saw him for the last time at eight o'clock on Saturday evening last, when he shut up shop; he has lived with me all his life; he was single, and a little over 20 years of age; he was not in the habit of staying out; generally he came home about half-past ten o'clock; he did not come home on Saturday night, and it was Sunday morning before I missed him; he had mentioned that he would some time go and see his aunt in Indianapolis, and I thought he might have gone to see my sister; he was a resolute boy, and generally did what he undertook; Mrs. Curtis, the mother of the young lady to whom he paid his addresses, asked me about him; she was the only person who spoke to me about him, and asked where he was, or if Charley was at home; I felt a little angry at his staying away; she said it was very strange he did not come home; she was astonished; there was no particular engagement, only he paid his addresses to her; there was probably nothing further; the first one who told me of the death of my son was a friend, (a brother-in-law of the young lady;) deceased had no money except a few shillings; his pocket book and watch were left at home; he had a chain on his person, one he bought in Chatham-street; I always gave him pocket money, he might have saved some; witness identified the fob-chain found on deceased; his son had no reason from difficulties in love affairs, or from other causes, to destroy himself; he was as happy as he could be; there was no other young man paying addresses to the young lady; he had no associates but respectable young men; he was on the whole a very good boy. [The Coroner desired the father to mention the names of several young men with whom he associated, which he did, saying they were all above suspicion.] Thos. Halsey, corner of Clinton-avenue and Myrtle, John Halsey, his brother, three master Belchers, Henry Taylor and his brother, of Clinton-avenue, were some of them; he knew of no one who had seen him since Saturday night; Mrs. Curtis and her daughter were the last persons who saw him on Saturday night.

By a Juror—My son's habits were on the whole very correct.

Alexander Bellings, sworn—I live at No. 89 South-street; I am a machinist; I did not know deceased; I think the deceased is the man I saw at the Fulton Hotel, between the hours of ten and eleven, conversing with Mr. Curtis, who keeps an oyster saloon; it resembles the young man very much; I never saw him before; I examined his clothes, and particularly the shoes; he had on a pair of Oxford ties; I did not hear the conversation; there was a woman with them; witness did not know her; she was a short, thick-set woman; the daguerreotype does not resemble the person; Curtis did not open his stand yesterday at all; have known him a year; he always opens his store when he has money to do it with; he having a stock of ten bushels of oysters on hand, witness thought it strange the saloon was not open, and thought there was something wrong when he heard of the finding of the body.

The inquest was here adjourned to 11 o'clock to-day.

The name of the lady whose daguerreotype was found on the deceased proves to be SARAH CURTIS, a highly accomplished and estimable young woman, who lives with her mother, a widow lady, at the corner of Washington and Tillary streets, Brooklyn. Young SAMUELS had been paying his addresses to her for several months past, and a strong mutual attachment existed between them. Miss CURTIS was surprised that her lover did not call to see her last Sunday night, as he had been in the habit of doing. Not hearing from him, on the ensuing day or evening, she became alarmed, and importuned her mother to call, on Tuesday morning, at MR. SAMUELS' house to make inquiries concerning him. The father of the deceased told MRS. CURTIS that his son had intimated his intention to go to Indiana to visit an aunt, and that he hoped that neither her daughter nor herself would suffer any uneasiness on account of his absence, as he would doubtless very soon return and explain the whole matter satisfactorily. The recovery of the body had not, yesterday afternoon, been communicated to Miss CURTIS, although the mother was apprised of it. Serious fears are entertained, as she is in delicate health, that when the story is told her it will give her a shock from which she can never recover.

The deceased was born in house No. 235 Adams-street, where his father still resides. He has always lived at home, except about a year and a half, when he was absent attending a boys' boarding school, at Ballston Springs, under the charge of Dr. BABCOCK. He returned from there nearly two years ago. Since his return he has assisted his father in the conduct of his business. He has always been attentive to his proper affairs, and regular in his habits. He very seldom remained out in the evening later than 10 or 10½ o'clock. On two occasions he has gone away from home, and remained several days, without letting his people know where he had gone. On both of these occasions he went to visit some relations in New-Jersey. His father spoke of him as being, on the whole, one of the best boys that ever lived, but at times a little headstrong, and inclined to be eccentric. He is the oldest of three children, and, if he had lived, would have been twenty-one years of age next October.

THOSE ACCUSED OF THE MURDER.

Since the recovery of the body the Police of the Second Ward have been unremitting in their efforts to ferret out the supposed murderers. THOMAS CURTIS and PATRICK KATON are the only parties who have thus far been arrested. CURTIS is an Irishman, about 40 years of age, and keeps an oyster saloon in South-street, opposite the Fulton Hotel. He has long been known to the Police as a desperate and hardened character, and has been several times arrested; the last time on a charge of passing counterfeit money, and it is alleged that he has nearly all his life made a living by acting as "pal" to the thieves and prostitutes of Water-street. He says that on Wednesday night he was in bed and asleep at No 4 Catharine-slip at the time. Some of the witnesses at the inquest state that they saw him in company with the deceased. He declares further that he never saw the deceased while living. PATRICK KATON, the other prisoner, is also an Irishman, and about the same age with CURTIS. He says the first time he ever saw the deceased was when the dead body was being taken past his cell to be placed in the yard in the rear of the Station-House. He cannot imagine why they should arrest him. He says he spent Wednesday evening and night with his family at No. 20 Cherry-st.

FRENCH WHITE ZINC PAINT,
MANUFACTURED BY THE VIEILLE MONTAGUE COMPANY, OF PARIS.
Consumers of Paint throughout the United States are invited to test the advantage of this Paint over that made from Lead—
FIRST—It is a clear and brilliant white, surpassing Lead in color as well as durability.
SECOND—It does not contain poisonous acids, which render apartments newly painted with Lead so unwholesome, causing painters' colic, &c., &c.
THIRD—It will not change color by exposure to bad air or gases, so that it lasts longer than Lead.
FOURTH—Although its first cost is rather greater than that of Lead, it will prove more economical in the end.
This Zinc can be used for old or new work wherever a durable pure white paint is wanted.
It should not be adulterated with American Zinc, as it renders it thin and injures the color.
Parties who desire to use this beautiful Paint may obtain information where it can be procured pure and undulterated by applying to the Agents of the Company,

THE MORNING CALL.
One morning fair and sunny, with a purse containing money,
In a mood half grave, half funny,
At RANNEY'S I drop in.
There were ladies by the dozen, City belle and country cousin,
Charlotte, Annie, Clara, Susan,
And their beaux who lots of tin.
Each made her own selection of travels, voyages, fiction,
And each drew in connection
With it her whole, whate'er its name,
Some ornament she wanted, by Fortune kindly granted,
And went away enchanted,
So much richer than she came.

PERSONAL.

G.—YOU OR YOUR FRIENDS CAN OBTAIN THAT information by addressing S. SWAN & CO., Augusta, Ga.

A GENTLEMAN OF GOOD FAMILY, formerly residing in the East Indies, where he occupied no mean position, but for the last nine years engaged in business in the United States, has been reduced, in consequence of heavy losses sustained during the recent crisis, to a state bordering on absolute want. To meet the exigencies of every day—to support an unusually large family of young children, he saw himself compelled to part with plate, books, and furniture. Though possessed of no ordinary acquirements, he found it impossible to obtain employment or to enter into some business that would yield a sufficiency for the support of his numerous family. Dreading publicity of his misfortunes an aggravation of their bitterness, he has submitted in silence to privations till they can be borne no longer. The reflection of never having refused assistance when claimed—and many have been the occasions—gives him now the courage to appeal, in his turn, to the good will of those who possess both the heart and the means to come to his aid By emigrating to one of the Southern States, where his peculiar acquirements can be brought to bear, he hopes not only to save his family from want, but to be enabled to return, in the course of a twelve-month, such contributions towards the object in view as the generosity of those who feel for the sorrows of others may offer. Unquestionable references and satisfactory explanation will be cheerfully given by letter or at an interview. It is respectfully requested to address communications to GEORGE ST. AUBIN, Post-Office under the Bible-House, astor-place.

AT A MEETING OF THE STOCKHOLDERS of the DELAWARE AND HUDSON CANAL COMPANY, held at the office of the Company on Tuesday, March 30 1858 Mr. William Nelson was appointed Chairman and William M. Vermilye Secretary.

Mr. Olyphant, the President of the Company, presented and read the Annual Report and Statement of the affairs of the Company for the past year, which on motion of Mr Isaac C. Kendall, duly seconded, was accepted, unanimously adopted, and ordered to be printed under the direction of the Board of Managers.

The following preamble and resolutions, offered by Mr. Isaac C. Kendall, and seconded by Mr Vermilye, were unanimously adopted, ordered to be entered on the Minutes of the Company and published:

Whereas, Our late President, Mr. John Wurts, has felt obliged to resign his office as President of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company, on account of long-continued ill health; and

Whereas, The Stockholders of the said Company all agree in that they have lost an able, faithful and judicious officer, whose fidelity, ability and integrity during an administration of twenty seven years, amid the most adverse circumstances, through which the Company in former years so successfully contended, as well as through the latter years of its high prosperity, has never been questioned; and

Whereas, In the opinion of the Stockholders now assembled, at their first meeting after the retirement of Mr. Wurts, the Company is mainly indebted to him, aided by the able Board of Managers, for its ability in surmounting its trials in former years, and for its present high prosperity; therefore,

Resolved. That the cordial thanks of the Stockholders are hereby presented to Mr. Wurts, for his long and faithful services.

Resolved, That the Stockholders appreciate the high-minded, lofty, and strictly honorable course which has ever marked the administration of Mr. Wurts, and feel that it ought ever to be held in grateful remembrance.

Resolved. That the Stockholders cannot do justice to their own feelings without conveying to Mr. Wurts some evidence of their high appreciation of him as an officer and a man; therefore,

Resolved, That the Board of Managers be hereby requested to present to our late President such token of the approbation of the Stockholders as they may deem most appropriate, with a copy of these resolutions—and to procure for the use of the Company his portrait.

The meeting then ajourned.

WILLIAM NELSON, Chairman.
WM. M. VERMILYE, Secretary.

BANK NOTICES.

BOWERY SAVINGS BANK,
NEW YORK, March 30, 1858.

NOTICE.—THE DEPOSITORS ARE HEREBY NOtified that, on a revision of the By-Laws of this Institution, the 8th article thereof has been amended by the Board of Trustees, the same now forming the 5th section of article 6, and being as follows, viz.:

ARTICLE VI—Section 5—Drafts may be made, personally, or by the order, in writing, of the Depositor, (if the Bank have the signature of the party on their signature book,) or by letters of attorney duly authenticated; but no person shall have the right to demand any part of his principal or interest without producing the original book, that the payments may be entered therein; nor shall any person have such right without previous notice to the Bank of his intention to make such demand, of thirty days for any amount not exceeding three hundred dollars, and of sixty days for any amount exceeding that sum. All deposits received by the Corporation shall be in money taken in deposit by the incorporated Banks of the City of New-York, at par; and all payments shall be made in the same manner.

The effect of this amendment is to allow Depositors to draw their moneys on any business day upon notice of thirty days, if the sum drawn is less than $300, and of sixty days if over that amount, instead of restricting them to the third Monday of each month and one week's previous notice.

In practice, Depositors have been permitted to draw at any time without notice. It is not intended, in ordinary times, to deviate from this practice. But in the event of a money panic, the limitation to a single day, if enforced, would prevent many persons in actual need from the opportunity of drawing, and the Trustees have, therefore, with a view to the accommodation of all, made the above change, securing, however, beyond contingency, the interests of all the Depositors, by requiring the previous notice of thirty and sixty days, according to the amount intended to be drawn.

By direction of the Trustees,

THOMAS JEREMIAH, President.

G. H. COGGESHALL, Secretary.
